The church of St. Mary is in the Norman and Early English styles, and cousists of chancel with open timbered roof, divided from the nave by a finely carved oak screen, nave and aisle, and square wooden tower containing 5 belis: the chancel was restored in 1872 and the church in 1878: there is a picture of the church that the church from the restored in 1872 and the church in 1878: restored in 1872 and the church in 1878: there is a piscina in the south aide. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a rectory, yearly value £424, with 44 acres of glebeaud a pleasant parsonage house, in the gift of the Duke of Wellington and held by the Hon. and Rev. Wingfield Stratford Twisleton-Wykeham-Fiennes M.A. late fellow of New College, Oxford. There is a school for boys and girls, to held 80 words built and supported early by the Duke of to hold 80 pupils, built and supported partly by the Duke of Wellington; and also a chapel for Primitive Methodists. Hyde's Charity consists of £14, derived from a house and land and funded property, distributed in money twice yearly by the rector and churchwardens. Within the parish are situated the rains of the Caer Segont, or the city of the Segontiaci of the Britons and the Seguntium of the Romans, which are nearly a mile and a half in circumference: the walls on the south-east are the most perfect, being in some places nearly 20 feet high: during the contests between the defending Britons and the invading Danes, Silchester fell into the hands of the latter, who massacred the whole of its into the names of the latter, who massacred the whole of its inhabitants and levelled the city to the ground: the city was never rebuilt and at the present time we find no other buildings within its boundaries than a farm-house and its apportenances, and a small but ancient parish church, the remainder being divided into five fields, the surface of which, in dry weather, points out plainly the direction of the ancient tracts. Here are taken a conventions disclosing the managements. streets. Here extensive excavations, disclosing the remains of the ancient city, have been and are now (1880) being made, at the expense of the Duke of Wellington and under the direction of the Rev. Horace G. Monro: the coins found date from A.D. 37 to A.D. 405. About 150 yards from found date from A.D. 37 to A.D. 405. About 150 yards from the north-east angle of the city is an ancient amphitheatre. Silehester Hall, the seat of Captain E. Boteler Lloyd, stands in its own grounds of about 90 acres. The common land consists of 195 acres. The Duke of Wellington is lord of the manor and principal landowner; but part of the land belongs to Captain E. Boteler Lloyd and the Cooper and Davis families, and others. SOUTHAMPTON.

SOUTHAMPTON is a sesport, parliamentary and municipal borough, union, and market town, seat of a county court, district registry of the High Court of Justice and head of a rural deanery, watering place, railway station, a polling place for the Southern division of the county Hants and a county of itself, under the designation of "the town and county of the town of Southampton," 75 miles from London by road, 784 by the London and South Western railway, 13 by road, 78½ by the London and South Western railway, 13 south-by-west from Winchester, 61 from Dorchester, 23 from Sallsbury, 18 from Portsmouth by road and 26 by rail, 8 from Romsey, 15 from Lymington, 12 from Cowes and 27 from Chichester. To the north-east of the present town, on the opposite bank of the Itchen, where Bitterne now stands, the Romans had a military station called Clausentum, which was succeeded by the Anglo-Saxon town of Hantune. Canute, after his establishment on the throne, made this town his occasional residence. Southampton derived its importance in Norman times from being the port of Winchester. Richard II. enlarged the castle and strengthened the fortifications which had been erected for the defence of the town and harbour. Henry V. previously to the battle of Aginand harbour. Henry V. previously to the battle of Agin-court, marshalled his army here for his expedition against France, and during his stay in the town detected a con-spiracy formed against frim by Lords Cambridge and Scroop and Sir Thomas Gray, who were executed for treason and buried in the chapel of an ancient hospital, called God's House, which is still remaining and used as a church for French Protestants. Is the reign of Edward V. the town had materially increased in extent and importance, and its trade became so flourishing that the Lord Mayor of London was appointed collector of the duties at this port. Philip, King of Spain, on his arrival in England to espouse Queen Mary, landed at this port and was entertained at the sheriff's house by the mayor and his brethren.

house by the mayor and his brethren.

The ancient part of the town was formerly enclosed with walls nearly a mile and a quarter in circuit, of which, with their ruined circular towers, considerable portions are still entire, the principal being that reaching from the West Gate, along the shore northward. Of the ancient gates, the principal now remaining are West Gate and South Gate, in addition to Bar Gate, in relation to which last the more modern part of the town is distinguished by the appellation of Above Bar, from the other part, which is called High street.

When the ancient castle became the property of Lord Stafwhen the ancient caste became the property of Lord Stat-ford, the tower which crowned the keep was pulled down: in 1804 the Marquis of Landsowne bought the estate, and at a considerable expense erected a very extensive castle: after the desits of the Marquis it became the property of several persons, by whom it was taken down and the materials sin-posed of. The ground is now occupied by houses, and Zion Episcopal chapel, which is built of stone, formerly part of the materials of the castle.

The town is beautifully situated on a peninsula, rising gradually from the north-eastern shere of the Southsempton Water and bounded on the east by the river Itchen, over which is a bridge leading to Gosport, and on the south and west by a fine open estuary formed by the confluence of the stuary or bay are richly clothed with wood, and afford a succession of beautifully diversified scenery, the vicinity being studded with villages, manions and villas. Southsempton Water, about 2 miles broad at its entrance, near Calshot Castle, stretches north-westward nearly 7 miles. On the eastern shore are the rains of Netley Abbey, forming a picturesque object. The town is distinguished for the beauty of its situation; and the approach from the Lendon road is through an avenue of stately elms. The principal entrance is through the ancient Bar Gate, on the morth front of which are two gigantic figures, representing Sir Berois of Southampton annual payment or £200: their privileges were extended and confirmed by Henry VI. who erected the town, with a surrounding district, into a county of itself, and were modified by Charles I. The borough of Southampton is divided into five wards and the parliamentary and municipal bounds-ries are co-terminous. The corporation consists of a mayor, recorder, sheriff and senior and junior balliffs, ten aldermen, thirty councillors and subordinate officers, who hold quarterly sessions for trial of offences not capital, and assize (during the judge's circuit) for capital offences, their jurisdiction extending to the limits of the town and its county. Petty sessions are held daily. The borough returns two members sessions are held daily. The borough returns two members to parliament.

The town is well pased, lighted with gas and plentifully supplied with water from springs at Mainsbridge, about 3 miles from the town. Many of the handsome iron pillars for the gaslights were presented by William Chamberlayne esq. late member for the borough, in commemoration of which the inhabitants have erected a lofty cast-iron column. supporting a large gas light. The Southampton Gas Company's mains extend as far as Portswood, Stoneham, Swathling and Bishopetoke; also to Millbrook, Freemantle, Shirley, Redbridge, Eling, Bassett, Bitterne, Woolston and West End. The street tramways, opened in 1879, extend from the Itchen bridge to the Southampton common, to Portswood and to Shirley, and are much used.

STRATFIELD MORTIMER is a parish, a small | but it is principally in the county of Berks and is given in portion of which is in this county (see Mortimer West End), | the Post Office Directory of that county.

STRATFIKILDSAYE is a pleasant village and parish partly in Berkshire, 3½ miles south-east from Mortimer station on the county, hundred of Holdshot, Basingstoke petty sessional division, union and county court district, diocess and archdeaccary of Winchester and rural deasery of Basingstoke, north-eastern division. The church of St. Mary the Virgin was rebuilt in 1784, and is situated near the western extremity of the park: it is built in the form of a Greek cross, having chancel, nave and north and south trausept, with drum tower containing 5 bells and crowned by a cupola: in the south transept is a marble monument to Sir William Pitt, dated 1636, west of which is a fine merrel teblet by Flaxman, to the memory of George Lord Rivare, dated 1803: an organ was presented by the Duke of Wellington in 1867. The register dates from the year 1539. The living is a rectory, yearly value £930, with residence, in the gift of the Duke of Wellington and held by the Rev. Horace George Monro M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. Charities of £21 yearly value are distributed in bread and clothing. The Duke of Wellington is lord of the manor and chief landowner. Stratfield means the field of the road or way, the ancient Roman road from London to Silchester crossing the parishs of that name, of which there are three: the adjunct to this parish is derived from its belenging at one period to a family called Says, from whem it passed by marriage to Sir Nicholas Dabridgecourt, high sheriff of this county is the reign of Richard II.: about the middle of the seventeenth century it was purchased by Sir William Pitt, in whose family it remained till 1814, when it was purchased of Lord Rivers by Parliament and presented to the Sovereign a flag on each succeeding anniversary of the battle of Waterloo: the flag is placed in the armoury, or guard chamber at Windsor Cavile. The mansion spresents a pleasing apecimen of modern architecture: it stands in the midst of a spacious and well-wooded park of 1,500 acres, extending into the parishe of Str church and the rectory-house, and through it the river Loddon rolls its sleggish stream and forms several delightful sheets of water in front of the mansion. A monument was erected in 1866 to the memory of the late Duke of Wellington: its base consists of three courses of steps supperting a plinth of dressed granite, also formed of three courses, 12 feet square and 6 feet high: upon this plinth rests a moulded base, on which is a block of granite, 9 feet 6 inches high and 7 feet square, and weighing 40 tons: on each of the four sides of this massive stone is a sunken panel, that on the front has the word "Wellington" inscribed upon it, on the opposite panel are the words "Exceted by Arthur Richard, second Duke of Wellington, and the tenants, cervants and labourers on the estates of his father, as a token of affection and respect;" one of the remaining panels bears the inscription, "He was honoured abroad, for in all the might of conquest he was ever just, considerate and humane;" the other, "He was heloved at home, for he had great power, and ever used it well. He was firm in friendship, and his hand was open towards the poor:" this stone is surmounted by a monolith column 30 feet high, having a bronze base and weighing 21 tons: resting on this column, on a pedestal, is the statue, 8 feet 9 inches high: the late Duke is represented as w-aring the uniform of a Field Marshal: the monument, which altogether is 82 feet high, was erected by the Messes. Freeman, of Corawall, in accordance with the designs of the late Baron Marochetti. The soil is various: subsoil, chiefly clay, intermixed with gravel. The area is 2,617 acres; rateable value, £4,010; the population in 1871 was 515.

WHITCHURCH is a parish, town and station, head of a union and a polling place for the Northern division of the county, in Evingar hundred, Kingsclere petty sessional di-vision, Andover county court district, diocese and archdeaconry of Winchester and rural deanery of Basingstoke south-western division: the station on the Andover and Basingstoke branch of the South Western railway is half a mile from the town, which is 12 miles north from Winchester, mile from the town, which is 12 miles north from Winchester, 7 east-by-north from Andover, 12 west-by-south from Basingstoke and 59 miles from London. Whitchurch, which consists of five streets, all diverging from the Market place, although built on rather low ground, is considered extremely healthy, being near the head of the Test valley and sheltered by neighbouring bills on all sides but the south; the land here is of an undulating character. Over the Test is a brick bridge of five arches. There are three corn mills on the river. Whiting is made here. The town corn mills on the river. Whiting is made here. The town has a charter for a market, which was formerly held on Friday; it has long been obsolete, though several attempts have been made of late to revive it. Gas Works were erected in 1856. Though a borough by prescription, Whiterected in 1856. Though a borough by prescription, Whitchurch was never incorporated: It is governed by a titular mayor and bailiff, chosen annually at the Town Hall, at the court leet of the Dean and Chapter of Winchester: this constitutes the municipal corporation, which for some time has possessed no authority. The borough returned two members to Parliament from the 27th of Queen Elizabeth until 1852, when it was disfranchised by the Reform Act. Whitchurch was made a polling place for North Hants in November, 1858. The church of All Saints was restored in 1868, at a cost of about £4,000: it is a structure of mixed architecture, and consists of chancel, nave and sieles: the arches: at the west end is a square, massive tower, surmounted by an octagonal spire, upwards of 120 feet in helght. There are several fine brasses on the tombs of the Brooks' family, who entertained King Charles I. here, on his way to the battle of Newbury. On the restoration of the church, a curious monument was discovered in the old the church, a curious monument was discovered in the old walls; it is an effigy of a female reclining on a cross, supposed by antiquarians to be Queen Elfrida, and consequently about 900 years old. The register dates from 1607. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £205, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Winchester and held by the Rev. William Mason Dudley M.A. of St. Catharine's College, Cambridge. There is a library under the same roof as the church, consisting chiefly of theological works, being the bequest of the Rev. William Wood: access to this library is obtained on an order given by the vicar. Here are Wesleyan Methodist, Baptist, Primitive Methodist and Congregational places of worship. There are charities of the annual value of £100, which are distributed in food and clothing. Near the centre of the town is the Town Hall, a small old building, where the courts leet are held. A small old building, where the courts leet are held. A Mechanics' Institution was established at the Town Hall in 1855, and has a good library and reading rooms. Beclesiastical Commissioners are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are the Barl of Portsmouth, Melville principal ianuowhers are the Earl of Portamouth, Belville Portal esq. D.L. Belward Bedward Seq. and Messrs. George Edney and J. L. Balley. The soil is clayey loam; subsoil, chalk. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and turnips. The parish comprises the borough and the four small tithings of WHITCHURCH PARSONAGE, FREEFOLK PRIORS, CHARLOOTT and COLD HERLEY. The area is 6.142 acres: rateable value. 511.772; the monulation in architecture, and consists of chancel, nave and aisles: the 6,142 acres; rateable value, £11,772; the population in roof is supported by Transition, Norman and Early English | 1871 was 1,865.

The Parsonage tithing is merely the rectorial house and 183 acres of land, belonging to St. Cross Hospital, at Winchester. For Freefolk see Laverstoke.

CHARLCOTT is half a mile south and contains only three houses and 543 acres of land.

COLD HENLEY is from 2 to 3 miles north-east and comprises only one farm and four cottages.

WINCHESTER.

THE ancient city of Winehester is one of great historical a polling place of the Northern division of Hampshire, 66½ interest: it is a parliamentary and municipal borough, miles from London, 12 north-east from Southampton, 29 union, market and railway town, head of a county court from Salisbury, 37 from Chichester, 74 from Dorchester, 27 district and railway station, the capital of the county and from Portsmouth, 34½ from Reading and 19 from Basingstoke, whence there is a branch line of railway connecting south Western with the Great Western line at Reading, and also another branch line from the former to Salisbury, thus communicating with Dorsetshire and the Western countles with great facility. Here, as in a central point, the old post road from London to Southampton is met by six others from Guildford, Portsmouth, Poole, Salisbury, Andover and Whitchurch.

The city is seated on the eastern declivity of a hill, sloping to the right bank of the Itchen, which, dividing here, circulates through the streets and meadows in several smaller streams, abounding in trout and other fish; below the city the river is navigable to Southampton, but the canal has nearly fallen into disuse. At the foot of the High street the river is spanned by a stone bridge.

The limits of the city buildings are no longer retained within the old Roman quadrangular boundary of flint walls: of its four gates, the west gate alone has survived the ravages of time and war. The spacious High street, about three quarters of a mile in length, is composed of substantial, well-built houses, many of them ancient, and is intersected at right angles by several other streets, all well paved and lighted with gas, and supplied with water of the purest quality.

In the middle of the High street stands an ancient cross of stone, 43 feet high, of the fifteenth century, and of considerable architectural beauty, with a statue which is unauthenticated. The Pent House is an ancient piazza, extending from the cross on the south side of the High bout 2,000 voters. The mayor is the returning outcome.

The city has sent two members to Parliament from the 23rd Edward I. but previous to the Reform Act it was a close borough: it still sends the same number: there are about 2,000 voters. The mayor is the returning officer.

The city is locally situated in Buddlesgate hundred, diocese, archdeaconry and rural deanery of Winchester, chester division, but, with its liberties, is under the separate jurisdiction of its own municipality, incorporated by Henry II.: under the Municipal Act this consists of six aldermen and eighteen councillors, from whom the mayor is chosen, who hold quarterly sessions for the trial of all offences not capital; and a County Court is held at the Guildhall once a month. The Bishop's court, formerly held twice a week in the atherral close, had also jurisdiction for debt and damage over all places which had ever belonged to the see or convent of St. Swithun: in the days of Norman supremacy it was held under an oak, and is called Cheyney court, from chêne, the French name for that tree. The assizes for the county are held in March and July, at the County Hall. The quarter sessions are also held there.

Winchester was originally called Caer Gwent, and likewise Venta Belgarum, having, before the time of the Romans, been occupied by the Iherians, Britons and Bel-gians. Traces of its fortification by the Romans yet remain, and Roman relics are occasionally found. Two of their roads led from Winchester to Salisbury and Silchester. On the retirement of the Romans it became the metropolis of South Britain, subsequently of the kingdom of Wessex and of Egbert's dominion, from which time it was the frequent residence of the English and Norman monarchs, some of whom were crowned and others held parliaments here. The treasury and mint were also established here. In the reign of Athelstan, the famed triumph of Guy Earl of Warwick, over the Danish giant, Colbrand, in single combat, was achieved in the meadow to the north of the city, named from that occurrence Danemark Mede: the king is said to have witnessed the encounter from a turret in the north wall, still called Athelsian's chair: a representation of this battle is mentioned as existing on the city walls, and Col-brand's axe was preserved in the cathedral treasury till the reign of James I

To the especial favour of the illustrious Alfred the city owed much of its greatness : here Bmma, mother of Edward the Confessor, is said to have sustained the fiery ordeal. Under the cherishing protection of Henry I. it attained its highest pitch of prosperity; alike the seat of empire and focus of commerce, its buildings far exceeded their present limits, extending in the several directions to Worthy, Week, St. Cross and St. Magdalen's hill: the city suffered much from a desolating fire in that reign, but more in the contest between Stephen and Matilda. Henry VIII. closed the long annals of its splendour by a week's entertainment within its walls of the Emperor Charles V. to whom the round table, called King Arthur's, but ascribed with more probability to Stephen, but which is now supposed to have borne originally a Mappa Mundi, was exhibited, newly painted and repaired for the occasion, as an unquestionable monument of glorious antiquity.

At the general dissolution of monasteries this city was a prey to fresh devastations, which again were exceeded in the great civil war, when its royal and episcopal castles were oth destroyed. The Great Plague, in the reign of Charles II. extended its terrific ravages to Winchester, and an obelisk, on rising ground without the West Gate, marks the spot to which, with the most jealous precautions, the country people brought the provisions necessary to avert the additional calamity of famine, a vessel filled with water being stationed under the walls to receive the money in payment. Charles II. commenced the erection of a new palace, which, being left incomplete, was afterwards converted into a receptacle for prisoners of war, and a barrack capable of holding 2,000 soldiers: its name, the King's House, and many handsome mansions with which the temporary resort of the Court enriched the city, are existing proofs of that transient gleam of returning prosperity.

Winchester is supposed to be possessed of a glorious relic of former greatness, in the remains of Alfred, though the stone inscribed with his name, and supposed to have covered sed of a glorious relic stone inscribed with his name, and supposed to have covered his tomb, has been removed to the seat of P. H. Howard esq. of Corby Castle, Cumberland. The Conqueror's survey, called "Domesday Book," was compiled, and various coinages have been struck, here, and hence issued the charter of Ethelwolf, confirming the tithes to the clergy. To Winchester Castle, the palace of so many kings, tradition assigns the age of King Arthur; but the later edifice was, without doubt, chiefly, if not entirely, of Norman erection: it was dismantled by Cromwell: the hall, which alone escaped utter demolition, is the present County Hall: it is a fine building, 110 feet in length by 45 in breadth, the roof supported by elegant Gothic arches, springing from marble pillars: at the west end is suspended the famous round table, 18 feet in diameter, and inscribed in ancient characters with the names of Arthur's knights: the hall has been completely restored and decorated, and commodious been completely restored and decorated, and commodious courts, in lieu of those for a long time enclosed in it, have been added at the east, for the transaction of the magisterial, criminal and nisi prius business of the county.

St. Katherine's, or College Hill, a singular peninsulated elevation, distinguished by a clump of trees, separated from the meadows of St. Cross by several branches of the river, is supposed to have been a Roman fortification, communicating with the Roman road to Porchester. From a hill on the other side, called Oliver's Battery, Cromwell hombarded the other side, called Oliver's Battery, Cronwell hombarded the city, and his works may still be traced.

Hyde Abbey, founded under the will of King Alfred, originally stood within the cathedral precincts, between that edifice and the High street, but was removed, about a century before the Conquest, to Hyde, on the north side of the city: within its walls were the tombs of Alfred and those of several other Saxon princes: the abbey was destroyed soon after the Reformation, and its only remains are the precinct walls and foundations of the church: its rains supplied materials towards the erection of many adjacent buildings; the tower of St. Bartholomew's church is supposed to be wholly composed of them.

Many other monastic institutions disappeared at the generai Disolution. Of St. Mary's Abbey, founded by Alswitha, Alfred's queen, for her own widowed retirement, all vestiges are swept away.

The monument of past ages, far exceeding all others within this city in interest and importance, is its cathedral, in favour of which some writers contend for an antiquity ascending to the second century of Christianity : it is clearly authenticated, however, that one fabric was completed in the year 648, dedicated to 88. Peter and Paul, and described as of great extent and magnificence: it was rebuilt, probably, from the foundation, by St. Ethelwold; then by Bishop Walkelyn, in 1003, when, by a new dedication, St. Swithun was included among its patron saints, and his corpse was exhumed from the churchyard to be placed within the sacred edifice; this removal being delayed by violent rains, gave rise to the adage, that whenever rain falls on his festival (July 15th), it will continue for forty successive days: the large massive structure, with its lantern tower, possesses little exterior attraction beyond its venerable antiquity, and beautiful west front, erected by Edyngton, with the first window on the north and south side: the remainder of nave, modelled only by William of Wykeham; but the length, the grandeur of design and the exquisite beauty of detail of the interior, amply atone for any outward deficiency: it exhibits the usual form of a cross, and is one of the largest of English cathedrals, being 565 feet in length from east to west, the transepts 186 feet, breadth 87 and height 76: the world cannot produce specimens of sculpture more beautiful than the stone aitar-screen, erected by Bishop Fox, and some of the numerous monumental chantries which surround the choir: the font is Norman and square, and on its sides are sculptured figures: a thorough repair of the whole cathedral, which occupied sixteen years, was completed in 1828: the cathedral contains monuments of the following Bishops of Winchester, viz : Peter de Rupibus (6b. 1233) ; Ethelmar de Valence (ob. 1261), whose heart only is buried here; William de Edindon (ob. 1366); William of Wykeham (ob. 1404), founder of the Colleges of St. Mary Winton, Winchester and Oxford; Cardinal Beaufort, son of King E-ward III. (ob. 1447); William of Waynflete (ob. 1486). founder of Magdalen College, Oxford; Richard Fox (1528), founder of Corpus Christi college, Oxford, and Stephen Gardiner (ob. 1555); in addition is a coped marble tomb, attributed to King William Rufins (ob. 1100); an inscribed stone to Richard II. william Rufus (ob. 1100); an inscribed stone to Richard II.

son of King William I. (ob. 1080); a cross-legged effigy in armour of Sir Arnold de Gavaston, father of Piers de Gavaston (ob. 1302); a figure in bronze to Richard Weston K.G. Earl of Portland (ob. 1635); and black marble slab, with inscription, to Izaak Walton (ob. 1683); an oak screen, at west end of choir, is to the memory of Bishop Wilherforce west end of choir, is to the memory of Bishop Wilherforce and Dean Garnier; it is most beautiful and chaste, and designed by the late Sir Gilbert Scott: a very beautiful marble monument, resembling that of St. Thomas de Cantelupe in Hereford Cathedral, has been placed in the south transept as a memorial to Bishop Wilberforce: and a cenorabh is about to be placed to the memory of Bishop Sumner. An interesting story is told of the preservation of the tomb and chantry of William of Wykeham in the time of the Commonwealth, to the effect that when Cromwell's soldiers were about to enter it in their progress of application their were about to enter it in their progress of spoliation, their own colonel, one of the family of Wykeham-Flennes, the family which owns the ancient barony of Saye and Sele, who had himself been a founder's kin scholar of Winchester College, placed himself in the doorway, saying—"Whoever comes in here comes over my dead body!" That monument remained uninjured.

Wolvesey Casile, the ancient episcopal residence, built 1138, by Henry de Blois, Bishop of Winchester, nephew to Henry I. was pleasantly situated on a branch of the Itchen, a short distance south-east of the cathedral: it remained en distriction of the royal eastle: its picturesque ruins, principally those of the keep, and of the lofty and battlemented walls, are of considerable extent, nearly all clothed with ity, or concealed by trees and shrubs. Close to Wolvesey Castie stands the episcopal palace erected by Bishop Morley in 1684: it is now used as a school.

The city comprises the following parishes: -St. Bar-Winchester. The church is ancient and picturesque, containing numerous Norman details, and consists of a tower, chancel and chancel sisle, nave, north alsle, transept and south porch: the chancel, which was in ruins at the commencement of the present century, has been entirely rebuilt by the exertion of a former vicar, the Rev. W. Williams: a north sisle was added to the chancel by W. Williams: a north size was added to the chance by w. Barrow Simonds esq. M.P. for Winchester, the principal resident in the parish: the north transept was enlarged about the same time: the nave has been re-roofed, and its northern aisle completed during the present year: the main entrances are by the west tower and the south porch, within which is a very fine west tower and the south porch, within which is a very fine Norman doorway: the vicarage house was considerably enlarged under the late vicar, the Rev. C. Sloggett. The old abbey, founded by Alfred the Great, in the year 890, was subsequently removed by the monks to Hyde Meadows in 1110, and the remains of the royal founder were translated to their resting place in this spot with great pomp: abundant relice and foundations of the white subsets are till female below the surface but little abbey church are still found below the surface: but little above church are still found below the surface: our little remains above ground beyond the gateway, now leading into farm buildings, and pieces which have been worked into the masonry of the adjacent walls and into the parish church. The College, or Public Grammar school, the munificent foundation (1386) of William of Wykeham, consists of a warden, six fellows, one head master, one second master, warden, six fellows, one head master, one second master, nine house masters, several assistant masters, tutors and extra masters, three chaplains, seventy sel-olars and sixteen choristers, with a governing body consisting of a warden and fellows under the statutes of the founder, and sundry other distinguished persons appointed under the revised statutes, which are the result of modern legislation. The school occupies the original buildings, which wear a very venerable aspect, and consist of two spacious quad-rangles, adorned with sculpture: the inner one is of a uniform and elegant style of architecture: the hall and chapel occupy its south side: the interior of the chapel, which was built Richard II. has a ceiling like that of the chapel of King's College, Cambridge, the ante-chapel containing many ancient brasses: extending from the chapel, campai of king's Contege, Campriage, the ante-cnaper comtaining many ancient brases: extending from the chapel, southwards, are the cloiatera, 132 feet square; the schoolroom is a plain brick building (built in 1680 by Warden Nicholas, one of the greatest benefactors of the college); over its door is a fine bronze statue of the founder. The College tower was rebuilt about 1665 as a memorial to Warden Williams and Warden Barter, the two last wardens of New College and Winchester respectively, and is called "The Tower of the Two Wardens." The scholarships are open to the competition of all boys who have reached their tenth and not passed their fourteenth birthday: an examination, graduated in difficulty according to the age of the candidates, is held at the College annually during the month of July, notice of which is given in the public papers in March or April preceding: the names of the best of the candidates are arranged upon a roll, but only so many of those as are required to supply the vacancies that may occur during the ensuing year, are admitted echolars, and in the order in which the names attain the conditates are examined in elementary religious knowledge, English diotation, arithmetic, Latin Comglous knowledge, English diotation, arithmetic, Latin com-position (werse and proce), construing and parsing in Greek and Latin: the average number of vacancies is 14, and of competitors neurly 150. Boys called "Commoners" are also simitted into the school for education, but must be also samitted into the school for education, but must be resident in the house of one of the privileged tutors. There are thirty scholar-hips at New College, Oxford, epon to all boys alike who have received their education at the school, whether as scholars or commoners. Amongst the great cubic schools for the training of English youth, Winchester College holds a high rank is general estimation; and many of our greatest peets, divines, and statesmen have here received their education. There can be no question that in point of antiquariam interest, qualut customs and associations that last through life, Winchester College stands fartefers all other public schools. With a regime and constitution which have undergone a very considerable change since the operation of the University and Public Schools Parliamentary Commission, there is still much of the internal discipline, customs and associations of Winchester College, discipline, customs and associations of Winchester College, which remains as it was from its earliest date, and which has taken such deep and strong root that it will outlive all changes which may even yet in the progress of time bear appen it. Those customs and associations are well known, apen it. Those customs and associations are well known, for happily a Latin hexameter poem exists in the Winchester College Library, which describes them exactly as they existed at the period of the Reformation, by Christopher Johnson, a person of considerable note in the age of Queen Elisabeth, and has demanter from 1506 to 1571: it need not be said that its chief interest is for Wykelsamists, though it also has a general interest, as describing the early life of one of the greatest of England's public schools: it had mover been published till it was edited by the Rev. Charles Wordsworth, then accord master (Ostearius) and now Bishop of St. Andrew's and Fellow of Winchester College, who has added to Johnson's poem a collection of poetry, under the of St. Andrew's and renow or whomever conege, who has added to Johnson's poem a collection of poetry, under the title of "Winchester and its Memories," from his own pen and those of others: the quaintness of one couplet of Johnson's justifies its insertion in this place: he wrote a couplet in the same metre on each warden and each head master down to his own time, respectively eleven and twenty-six in number; his own lines on hierself are—

"Ultimus hic ego sum; sed quam bene, quam male, noto

Dicere:

Qui de me judicet alter erit."

Wykcham's scheme was a grand one: he first built New College in Oxford—the 580th anniversary of which was celebrated on October 15th, 1879—and ten years later he completed the buildings of the sister foundation, the scholars of which were to supply the vacancies in fellowships as they occurred in the elder foundation. Modern legislation, commencing in 1852, has interfered to a very considerable extent with Wyksham's original plan, but so far from showing the slightest symptom of decadence or decay, each society seems to have started into a fresh existence with renewed life and vigour and to be among the most successrenewed life and vigour and to be among the most successful and flourishing of ancient institutions adapted to the necessities of modern times: volumes might be written, as several have been written, on these two colleges, their history and their associations, and these who wish to read more of the Wykehamical literature may do so in "The life of William of Wykeham," by Lowth; "William of Wykeham and his Colleges," by the Rev. Mackenzie Walcott B.D. of Exeter College, Oxford, precenter of Chichester Cathedral; the work above quoted from by Bishop Wordsworth; and "Wykehamica," a history of Winchester College, by the Rev. Henry C. Adams M.A. late fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford, new vicar of Old Shoreham, Sussex.

The Guildhall, opened May 14th, 1873, by Lord Selborne, is a very handsome building, in the Geometric Gothic style; the total length is 150 feet, and height 53 feet, with a central tower, the height of which to the top of the vane is 112 feet: the material of the façade is of Bath stone, and the erection is enlivened by the use of red Mansfield stone; Portland and York stone are also occasionally introduced: the Guildhall contains offices for the mayor, town clerk and town surveyor, a very handsome large assembly room, session hall, magis-trates' room, committee room and museum, police station and volunteer armoury; the total cost of the building exceeded £16,000; Mesers. Jeffery and Skiller were the architects. Adjoining, is a handsome building, containing on the ground floor, the public reading room and library, and upstairs the School of Art.

The Market house in High street is a brick building:

markets are held on Wednesday and Saturday, the latter the principal for agricultural produce. The fairs are held on the first Monday in Lent, and the 23rd and 24th October; St. Magdalen's (now neglected), on the 2nd August; and St. Giles', on the 12th September, for cheese, now all but extinct; it was at one period the largest fair in England, and tinct; it was at one period the largest fair in England, and extended to 16 days, during which time no business was allowed to be transacted elsewhere within 7 leagues of the kill; it was held on St. Glles' Hill, and formed a kind of temporary city, entirely mercantile, whole streets being appropriated to particular commodities.

The corn market is held on Saturdays at the Corn Exchange, in Jewry street, which is a very handsome and commodious building. St. John's are convenient rooms for concerts and balls, of frequent occurrence in the winter months. The city possesses at the Gaildhall a public library, reading room and a museum.

The Mechanics' Institution was formed in 1835, and occupies a handsome building in the square; but its numbers have outgrown the accommodation of the lecture hall and lectures are now mostly given in the assembly room of the new Guildhall; it has a library of 6,500 volumes, and daily new truidmail; it was a morary or 0,000 volumes, and daily and evening reading room, exceedingly well supplied with newspapers, periodicals and reviews: the number of members is more than 600.

to the southern military district; the line battalions are the 37th and 67th foot; the rifle depôt of the 60th rifles and the rifle brigade belonging to the home military district is also here, and it is the headquarters of the Hampshire militia. The Barracks stand in a commanding position at the west side of the city, and will hold 2,000 infantry: there are officers' quarters, separate barracks for married soldiers, a hospital, large school room and gymnasium. Races are held annually upon some extensive downs, about three miles north-west of the town.

The Royal Hants County Hospital, founded 1736, was the earliest provincial one in the kingdom; the yearly fixed income from endowments is about £800, and from subscriptions, about £2.000. The new building, one of the finest of its kind, from plans by Mr. Butterfield, at a cost of £30,000, is altirate in the Remark and is situate in the Romsey road.

The Hospital of St. Cross, originally built and endowed in 1136 by Henry de Blois, the brother or King Stephen, was very much enlarged by Cardinal Beaufort; the "Almahouse of Noble Poverty," which he added to the existing hospital, was intended for a warden, 2 priests, 35 brethren and 3 sisters; at present this ancient institution consists of the master and 13 brethren only, of De Blois' original foundation,

The master is the Rev. William Gerrard Andrewes M.A. of Hertford College, Oxford, appointed by the Bishep of Winchester in 1868. The curate is the Rev. William Masfen Roberts B.A. of Jesus College, Cambridge.

Part of the ancient hospital of St. John, founded in 934, affords an asylum for 46 poor persons; the remainder has been converted to other uses, its hall serving for public meetings, and in its chapel, dedicated to St. John, public worship is performed as in the parish churches; the income is about £1,800. THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

little more than a mile. The island is of a lozenge shape, of wealthy residents. 22] miles from east to west, 13 from north to south, about 60 stretching to the water's edge; but on the southern shore falling through a ravine; occasionally the coast curves inward, and at either extremity is a bold rocky promontory. Its geological structure is interesting, as it includes several strate, from the tertiary to the wealden formation, and which in some places are closely compressed together. A high range of chalk hills, or downs, stretch from east to west, and a still higher range runs southward, terminating abruptly at the Undercliff, which enjoys a high reputation for its picturesque scenery and the mildness of the atmosphere: it consists of various shelves, from a quarter to half a mile in breadth and 6 miles in length, gradually sloping to the sea, caused by landslips from the chalk downs. St. Boniface down, at Ventnor, is the highest in the island, being about 900 feet in height: on Ashley down, which is 420 feet above the sea, is a sea mark, built of stone by the Trinity Board in 1795. The Needles, at the western extremity, are isolated masses of rock, principally chalk and flint; the Needles lighthouse is on the highest point of this part of the island, and at St. Catherine's Point, at the southern end, is another lighthouse. Near here is a rock worn by the action of the sea into the shape of an arch; the cliffs at this part rise to the height of 600 feet, and are frequented by numbers of aquatic birds. There are several singular chasms in the cliffs, or chines, as they are called, produced by the continued action of water, of which Shanklin, Blackgang and Luccombe are the principal. The principal bays are Alum Bay, at the western end of the island, remarkable for its sands of variegated hues; Sandown Bay, with its fine sands, on the south-east; Freshwater and Brixton Bays, on the south-west; and Thorness Bay, on the north-west. The principal river in the island is the Medina. which runs from south to north, dividing the island into two parts, termed respectively East and West Medina: it rises in St. Catherine's Hill and falls into the sea at Cowes: it is navigable for ships of small tonnage to Newport. The river Yar, at the western extremity, flows almost through the island from south to north.

The island is under the control of a governor, who is styled the Governor and Capt.-General: it forms a magisterial division of Hampshire, and contains the liberties or hundreds of Rast Medina, with 14 townships or parishes and West Medina with 16: it is within the archdeaconry of the Isle of Wight and diocese of Winchester, and is divided into the rural deaneries of East, West and North-East Medina: as a parliamentary district it returns one knight of the shire and the borough of Newport two members. The polling places for the county are West Cowes, Newport, Ryde, Ventnor, Shorwell and Yarmouth.

The scaports derive some advantage from the supply of shipping lying in Spithead and the neighbouring roads; but Governor's Capt .- General of the Island, Viscount Eversley the chief source of prosperity to the island is from the Deputy Governor, A. Harbottle Estcourt esq.

THIS island lies off the south shore of Hampshire, within 'numerous visitors who resort to its romantic scenery. From the jurisdiction of which it is included. The Solent sea, its sheltered position and the mildness of its clima'e it is a separating it from the mainland, varies from four to six favourable resort for invalids, more especially those suffering miles across, while at one point, near Hurst Castle, it is | from cliest complaints; it is likewise covered with the seats

The rainfall of the Isle of Wight is about 30 inches per in circumference and including 93,341 acres. On the north | annum: It is measured daily at three places: the amounts the land slopes to the margin of the sea, woods and meadows for 1878 were, St. Lawrence, 33; inches, Newport, 30 inches, Osborne, 241 inches. The temperature is remarkably uniis a precipitous barrier of cliffs, with here and there a stream form, especially along the sheltered region known as the " Undercliff."

The towns, which are all more or less frequented by pleasure visitors, are Newport, with 7,956 people (in summer, 14,000); Ryde, with 11,260 (in summer, about 15,000); West Cowes, with 5,730 (in summer, about 12,000); Ventnor, with 4,841 (in summer, between 6,000 and 7,000); Yarmouth, Freshwater and Shanklin, 2,035; Sandown, 2,320 and St. Helen's. Cowes and Ryde, on the north, carry on the chief trade, and are the ports of entrance for steamers from the railway stations on the mainland; and also the head quarters of yacht clubs: there is some intercourse between Yarmouth and Lymington: there are no seaports on the south.

The whole of the parishes in the island are incorporated, for poor law purposes, under a local Act: the Union Workhouse is at Carisbrooke. A county court for the whole of the island is held alternately at Newport and Ryde every month. In the island there are large military establishments and at Parkhurst is a convict station. The railways are one from Cowes to Newport; another from Ryde to Ventnor, having stations at Brading, Sandown and Shanklin; a line was opened on February 1st, 1875, from Sandown to Newport, and there is a line from Newport to Ryde direct. Coaches run frequently to various parts of the island, and communication is made with the mainland by steam vessels from Ryde and Cowes to Southampton and Portsmouth.

The Royal Isle of Wight Infirmary, at Ryde, was erected in 1849, at a cost of upwards of £2,000, and is supported by public subscriptions: it was enlarged in 1866, and will now contain 30 in-patients: H. Selby Little, house surgeon and secretary.

The island seems to have received its name from the Iherians, and was an early seat of trade with the continent. After being held by the Britons and Belgians, it was settled by the Romans, who had their chief post at Carisbrooke. When the English conquered Britain, it became a Jutish kingdom, and was a separate commonwealth until seized by the more powerful English kings: in the middle ages it was constituted a feudal kingdom, under the Rivers or De

The population in 1861 was 55,362, and in 1871, 66,219. The population was taken at a period when there were few visitors: in the summer time the population is nearly doubled.

THE GEOLOGY OF THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

THE rooks of the Isle of Wight offer to the student an epitome of the geology of the south-east of England. In the splendid sections exposed along the line of coast we are enabled to examine the strata, and trace their relations to each other in a manner which is impossible in inland districts, while the beauty of the scenery, originated by and dependent upon the arrangement of the rock-masses, lend an additional charm to the investigation.

Such a region would be likely to attract, and has attracted. much attention from geologists. In the map of its surface (Sheet 10) constructed by the officers of the Geological Sur-(Sheet 10) constructed by the officers of the Geological Survey, we have an exact representation of the position at the surface occupied by each formation, while the horizontal (Sheet 47) and vertical (Sheet 25) sections also published by the Survey, show the lie of the beds, their thickness &c. with the greatest accuracy; descriptive of this map and the sections we have an excellent memoir by Mr. Bristow, published in 1862: Professor E. Forbes in 1856 well explained the structure of the northern half of the island in his memoir on "The Tertlary Fluvio-marine Formation of the Isla of Wight." Isle of Wight."

Isle of Wight."

Of earlier workers we must note Mr. Thomas Webster, who wrote some good descriptions of the strata in Sir H. C. Englefield's "Description of the Isle of Wight," published in 1816.

Dr. Mantell's book, "Geological Excursions round the Isle of Wight" (2nd Edition, 1851), has numerous plates of fossils and is well known, whilst Mr. E. P. Wilkins has also written a capital general account of the geology of the Island. Island.

In the volumes of the Palsontographical Society the shells which ecour in the Tertiary bods have been admirably figured and described by Messrs. Edwards and Searles Wood, and the reptiles of the Wealden Formation by Proressor Owen. In the earlier publications of the Geological Society of London, many valuable papers on special points have appeared by Dr. Fitten, Sir Charles Lyell, Professor Owen, Meurs. F. W. Simans, J. S. Bowersank and S. P. Pratt, while Professor Prestwich aided greatly in clearing up the relations of the Tertiary strata to each other. Of later date, in the "Quarterly Journal" of the Geological Society date, in the "Quarterly Journal" of the Geological Society we have Professor Jado's paper on the Punfield Beds (vol. xxvii. 1871), Mr. W. Whitaker on the chalk (vol. xxi. 1865), Mr. Godrington on the gravels (vol. xxvi. 1870) and Mr. J. W. Hulke on the great reptilian bones so diligently collected by the Rev. W. Fox.

The dweller in London can see specimens of almost all the recks and fossils which occur in the Isle of Wight, arranged in the Geological Museum in Jermyn street; here too be can examine the beautiful models of the island constructed by the late Capt. Ibbet-on, which afford not only a faithful representation of the topography, but express the geological structure in the most accurate manner.

In explaining the position and nature of the strata it seems the simpler plan to commence with those which are the oldest or first formed. These will be found und rlying all the others, and from them we can ascend gradually, passing over rocks some thousands of feet in thickness, until passing over rocks some thousands of the river-gravels or shingle-beaches which are now in course of formation.

THE WEALDEN FORMATION.—The beds called by this name are exposed on the south-west side of the island along the coast between Compton Bay and Atherfield, and they appear at the surface as far inland as Mottesione and Briston; on the east coast they are again seen over a small area round Sandown; altogether they perhaps form five square miles of the surface. These two areas of exposed Wealden strata are of course connected, and the beds run weaten strate are or course connected, and the beds run uninterruptedly across the Island, but over all the central part they are covered over and concrated by newer beds; a boring made at Gedsirili, Arreton, Kingston &c. would pierce these later-formed rocks and enter the Wealden strata at a depth of a f-w hundred feet.

The lowest Wealden strata are seen on the shore at Brook Point; here at the base is a thick bed of pale sandstone, above which come red and green marls; these dip or incline on one side to the north, and on the other to the south and east, marking in fact that bending or arching of rock-heds which geologists call an anticlinal curve. In the variegated marls on the shore there occur numerous fragments of the trunks of pine-trees, forming what has been called the "Pine raft"; the stems are of a black colour and have been completely mineralized, yet the woody structure, the bark, and the rings of annual growth can still be traced; thin slices examined under the microscope show the dotted vessels characteristic of pine-trees. No mosts are found, and it is not probable that these trees grew where we now find them; they were probably swept here by the current of a mighty river, just as thousands of similar trees are now carried down by the Mississippi and other large rivers until carried down by the Mississippi and other large rivers until on reaching the estuary they become water-logged and sink to be buried underneath the sand, mud &c. which go to form the delta. Iron pyrites is a common mineral at Brook Point, its yellow crystals filling up cracks in the tree-trunks, some of which are 2 or 3 feet in diameter and 20 feet in length.

Walking southwards along the shore past Chiltren Chine and Grange Chine we note a continuance of the variegated marls, clays and sandstones, and also see the incommand character of the different layers, the sandstone beds especially character of the different layers, the sandstone beds especially thinning out and disappearing altogether in very short distances. The thickness of the true Wesilden beds exposed here is about 300 feet, which is of course net the total thickness inassauch as the base is not seen. Mr. Bristow believes them all to represent the "Wesild Clay" of Sneer. In the Sandown neighbourhood similar beds can be seen at In the Sandown neighbourhood similar beds can be seen at low tide on the shore, and the trunks of pine-trees occur here also. The feedle of the Weaden Beds are of freshwarer species, and include the minute drustmeans railed Cyprides; shells, as Unio Valdensis and Paludina Suscerensis; scales and teeth of a fish, Lepidotus; and most remarkable of all, great bones of extinct reptiles. Of one of these, the Immendan, Mr. Beckles has found the fortraints markable of all, great bones of extinct replies. Of one of these, the Iguanodon, Mr. Beckles has found the footprints on a had of sandstone on the shore west of Brook Point, and at Brook Chine, Sandown and several other localities the Rev. W. Fox has found bones both of the Iguanodon, the Plesionaurus and a reptile new to science—the Hypsilophodon. Thus in these deposits of Wealden age we have evidence of a mighty river which flowed from west to east, draining a continent which stretched far into the Atlantic: Wardour in Wiltshire to the Boulonnais in France, a distance of 200 miles, and from the Isle of Wight to Quainton in Bucks, about 160 miles; the deta of the Ganges affords in Bucks, about 160 miles; the delta of the Ganges affords us at the present day an instance of a tract of land similar is origin and of about the same area.

The Punfield Series. These were so named by Professor Judd from their occurrence in Puntield Cove on the north side of Swanage Bay in Dorset-hire: in the Isle of Wight they consist of grey shales with some beds of lime-stone and sandstone, altogether about 200 feet thick. They are seen at Brixton Bay, Atherfield Point and Sandowa Bay to overlie the Wealden Brds proper. They contain both fresh-water and marine fossils and show the coming on an one see, the old delta sinking and the roast line of an one see, the old delta sinking and the roast line of both fresh-water and marine fossils and show the coming on of an open sea, the old delta sinking and the coast line of that period slowly receding westwards. Fibrous carbonate of line, commonly called "beef," is common in the limestone bands, which are used locally for rough paving and which are sometimes quits made up of small system; in Compton Bay the Punfield series have a high northerly dip and are traversed by several small faults; they are also well seen at Cowleaze Chine and Barnes High: the sandy beds at the latter place have yielded many reptilizan bones to the local geologists.

THE LOWER GREENSAND .- The strata known by this name are about 900 feet in thickness; they are of marine origin, and show a continuance of that depression of the origin, and show a continuance of that depression of the earth's surface in this district which we have just slinded to. At the junction with the Puntield Series is a stratum about 2 teet thick, full of a large bivalve shell called Perna Mulleti; next come 60 feet of clayey strata called the Atherfield Clay, because it is well exposed at the place somemed; then come alternations of market called the come alternations of market. named; then come alternations of sandy chays and concre-tionary sands salled the "Grankers" from the noise the sea makes in breaking over the ledges of this rock which near Atherfield Point stretch far out into the sea; they contain numerous remains of Crustaceans (Astacus), from which two layers are known as the "lobster beds;" above these come 400 feet of sandy clays with Terebratula sella &c. and come 400 feet of sandy clays with Tereoristical solid act. and the uppermost bede are ferruginous sands about 250 feet thick, in which fossils are source: these upper sands were formerly worked for glass-house purposes at Rocken End. The Lower Greensand is well exposed on the coast between Atherfield Pointby Whale Chine, Welpen Chine and Blackgang Chine to Rocken End; it stretches acress the Island from Arreton and Shorwell on the north by Newchurch, Godshill and Kingston to Shanklin and Chale on the south, extending westwards in a narrower outerop, past Brook Charch to Compton Bay; it is the "won and" of Webster, and the "Shanklin and" of the natives; it also forms the heats of the "Undercliff." At Blackgang Chine a chalybeate spring issues from a bed of soft sandstone, 130 feet above the sea In his memoir Mr. Bristow gives a list of 137 species of fessils from the Lower Greensand of the Isle of Wight, 111 of which were shells.

THE CRETACEOUS FORMATION.—The lowest division of the great series which takes its name from its most characteristic member, the chalk (Latin oreta, chalk), is called the Gault: this is a bed of blue clay, sometimes study, and with minute-spangles of trica; its thickness here is 169 fort; it is known in the latent as the "blue slipper" from the tendency of the overlying strata to slip or slide over its surface. "The beautiful and romantic scenery of the Undercliff or Back of the Island has been mainly produced by the foundering of the superincumbent strata over the Gault clay, when the latter has been rendered unctaous by the water which (after percolating through the overlying beds) furnishes the land springs which break forth at its surface." It is these springs, too, which cut narrow ravines or guilies, locally termed "chines," in their short and rapid Bay curving round to Gautt can be traced from Compton Bay curving round to Gatcombe, and thence just north of Yaverland to the sea; along this line it dips to the north. Crossing the broad valley excavated in the Lower Greensand we again find the Gault as a narrow band with an outcrop about 300 yards wide encircling the southern range of Downs, but here it dips to the south: evidently these northern and southern outerops were once connected, and of the mass which once stretched right across, we have a frag-ment left in the outlier at Gossard Hill. The Gault clay is recognisable by the damp and rush-grown nature of its soil, which is everywhere in pasture. Fossils are few, but in the gally west of the hotel at the top of Blackgang Chine, such shells as Inoceramus sulcatus and I. concentricus have been found.

The Upper Greensand.—This division is composed of sandstone and sandy beds containing chert (an impure variety of flint), about 150 feet in thickness; it is also known as the Firestone and Malm Rock. We can trace it as a narrow hand from Compton Hay running eastwards along the southern foot of the Chalk Hills, to the cliffs in Saudown Bay beneath Bembridge Down; then on the south side of the Island the Upper Greensand forms the long lower slopes of the Downs between Chale, Niton and Shanklin, having too an outcrop half-a-mile broad for some distance north and south of Gateombe; it is finely exposed in the cliffs on the right-hand side of the road in going from Ventner to Blackug. On Shanklin Down the higher beds are quarried for building-stone; when first raised the stone is soft and easily worked, but it rapidly hardens when exposed to the atmos-Most of the old churches on the south side of the Island are built of this material: the chert furnishes an excellent stone for road-mending, being much tougher than the chalk-flints. Fossis are not numerous, but the branching arms and stems of a sponge (Siphonia) are frequent on the surfaces of the sandstone heds; the shells, such as Nautilus Fittoni, Trigonia caudata &c. are all of marine species.

from the presence of dark green grains of the mineral glauconite; it contains many fossils, as Scaphites, Ammonites varians &c. with many rounded phosphatic nodules called coprolites.

The chalk of the Isle of Wight has been minutely studied by the well-known French geologist, Dr. Charles Barrois, and the following table, showing the thickness of the subdivisions and their characteristic fossile, is taken from his valuable work.

Total thickness

The Chalk-Marl is of a greyish tint; it is dug for lime-burning and sometimes for building-stone: there is a large quarry at the west end of Brixton Down, and the interior of Brixton church is partly built of this stone. Stems of a plant, Clathraria Lyellii, are found in it. The common white chalk which succeeds is a pure earthy limestone, which is divisible into a lower portion—without filmt—and an upper, in which black nodules of that substance are seen at bedding of the rock. These two divisions are separated by the bed which Mr. Whitaker has called the chalk-rack; this is a hard, cream-coloured band of limestone about a foot thick; it often has a layer of green-coated nodules on top, with rumps of iron pyrites: it is seen in a chalk-pit on the south-east corner of Shalcombe Down, in pits on the south side of Mottretone Down, in the quarry east of Carisbrooke Castle, in a disused pit on the western ead of Arreton Down and in the pits about a mile south-west of Brading church.

The White Chalk forms the ridge of hills which stretches east and west right across the Island, from Culver Cliff to the Needles, isolated masses of rock standing in the sea and marking the former extension of the chalk, which once was continuous with that of Dorsetshire. At the extremities of the ridge the chalk is seen to dip very steeply, almost vertically where in contact with the Tertiary Beds, to the north, so that the outcrop is very narrow, from a quarter (Afton Down) to half a mile wide, but going inland the dip decreases and the outcrop widens to 3 miles between Mottestone and Carisbrooke. The hills on the south side of the Island called St. Catherine's Down (830 feet above the sea) and Shanklin Down, are outliers of chalk having a slight southerly dip; these hills were once continuous with the main central ridge, but in the course of long ages the beds forming the top of the arch or curve which connected them have been worn away by the agencies of the weather and by the sea. The sea-chiffs formed by the chalk are striking objects from their whiteness and verticality: the latter is due to the joints or cracks by which the rock is traversed, and by which it is divided into a series of more or less regular blocks; the sea attacks and wears away the base of the cliffs, and then the upper portion falls down; the hard filmt nodules are used by the waves as missiles, which they hurl with great force against the face of the rock, thus making it to aid in its own destruction.

The chalk hills, or downs, as they are called, are easily distinguished by the bold, rounded outline which they present; scantily furnished with soil, they are covered by dense short herbage on which sheep do well, but woods are wanting, though the brech in places grows fairly well: the surface is dry, for the chalk is a very porous rock and rapidly absorbs the rain. Good sections are exposed in the numerous pits where the chalk is extracted for lime-barning, while the flints furnish fair road-metal. Fossis are frequent, such as ses-urchins of the genera Micraster, Ananchytes &c. shells like Inoceramus, Pecten, Terebratula &c. but, in fact, the mass of the white chalk is made up of the minute shells of foraminifera, which are only visible under the microscope, so that geologists class chalk as an organically formed rock.

The general opinion is that it accumulated on the floor of an ocean, in a similar manner to the whitish coze, which deep-sea soundings bring up from the bed of the North At-The Chalk.—The base of this formation is marked by a lantic. The so-called Agates, or Isle of Wight pebbles, which bed of yellowish marl 5 feet thick, called the Chloritic Marl. are common on the beach between Ventuor and Sandown, are really rolled chalk-flints, which owe their beauty to the silicified sponges they often contain: the brown markings on them are due to the presence of peroxide of iron: the "lale of Wight diamonds" are fragments of rock-crystal

THE TERTIARY EPOCH.—Of the great interval of time which elapsed after the deposition of the chalk and before the formation of the lowest Tertiary strata, we really know little or nothing. We are certain that the time-interval must have been immenae, for in the newer bods, which we are now going to describe, we find the remains of an eaare now going to describe, we made to remain an interest the present day, with which, indeed, a few of them are identical. Hence Sir Charles Lyell called the lowest Tertiary beds the ECCENE, a word which means the "dawn of new life."

ECCENE FORMATION.—The lowest strata of this division are called the Woolvoich and Reading Beds; they were formerly known as the Plastic Clay. They are seen queither formerly known as the Plastic Clay. They are seen on either side of the Island resting on a rather uneven surface of chalk, in Whitecliff Bay on the east, and in Alum Bay on the west: at the latter place their thickness is 84 feet, but they thickness eastwards to 200 feet in Whitecliff Bay; they have been so upheaved as to be now standing on end, or nearly vertical, inclining to the north; they consist of rad, white and blue mottled clays, with some brownish sends: fossils are wanting: at Newport coarse pottery and tiles less are made from the clays of this age.

London Clay, or Bogner Beds.—These vary from 200 feet in thickness in Alum Bay to 300 feet in Whitecliff Bay; they are divided from the Reading Beds by a band of flintpebbles, and consist of grey and brown sandy clays, from which bricks are made at Newport. The fossil shells, such as Pinna affinis, Panopæa intermedia and Pholadomya margaritacea show the London clay to have been formed in a sea some 600 feet deep, and probably in the proximity of land.

The Bagshot Beds.—This is the term applied by the Geological Survey to a great thickness of strata (altogether about 1,200 feet) composed of sands and clays, the subdivisions of which were first made by Mr. Trimmer in 1850.

Lower Bagshot Beds.—These are 660 feet thick in Alum Bay, but only 142 feet in Whiteeliff Bay. They are mainly sands, but contain beds of pipe-clay, in which, at Alum Bay, the remains of beautifully-preserved leaves of land plants occur. Four species of Leguminosæ (the pea and bean order) have been found, long thick leaves of fig trees, bean order) have been found, long thick leaves of fig trees, and the palmated leaves of an Aratia.

The Middle Bagshot Beds are 411 feet thick in Alum Bay and 710 feet in Whitecliff Bay: they have been subdivided into a lower or Bracklesham Series (111 feet thick), and an upper series—the Barton Clay (400 feet): these are separated by a bed of flint pebbles. In Alum Bay there are beds of wood-coal, or lignite, 2 feet thick, in the Bracklesham Beds, and the rootlets can be traced in seams of clay which underlie these lignite beds. The Rev. O. Fisher has minutely studied the same strata in Whitecliff Bay (see Journal of Geological Society, vol. xviii.) and found Cardita plantosta to be the most common fossil shell. planicosta to be the most common fossil shell.

The Upper Bagshot Beds are pure white and yellow sands, about 150 feet, which have long been worked in Alum Bay for glass-making purposes: between 1850 and 1855 there were shipped from Yarmouth 21,984 tons of sand mostly to Bristol and London.

All these Bagshot Beds can be traced with some difficulty right across the Island, but it is in Alum Bay that they are best seen: here the rich and variegated colours of the sands and marls, combined with their almost vertical position, form a scene of surpassing beauty.

UPPER ECCENE OR FLUVIO-MARINE SERIES.—The lower and middle Eccene strata are all of marine origin, but the upper beds indicate an elevation of the sea-bottom, and are of a fresh-water and estuarine character, having been deposited in and near the mouth of a great river: their divisions and relations were thoroughly worked out by Pro-fessor E. Forbes between 1848 and 1853.

The Headon Series form the central and lower part of Headon Hill, where they are 180 feet thick: they extend thence past Newport to Whitecliff Bay: east of the Medina river they occupy a large area, having been elevated by a fault or dislocation of the strata, which runs nearly north and south along the bed of the river: the "throw" of this fault is about 100 feet, so that the Headon Beds at East Cowes have been elevated 100 feet above their proper position. At Headon Hill the lowest beds contain such freshwater shells as Planorbis euomphalus and Cyrena cycladiografic with a landalul Heliz Industriction. water shells as Planorous succeptuates and Cyrena cyclan-formis, with a land-shell, Helix labyrinthica: higher beds contain brackish-water shells, as Potamides cinctus, and even marine forms as Venus incrassata: higher still are beds of fresh-water limestone, with Paludina and Cyrena.

The Oshorne, or St. Helen's Series, are red and green sands and clays, about 80 feet thick, containing fresh-water shells and the seed-vessels of Chara, a fresh-water plant: a bed of sandstone, called the Nettlestone Grit, has been much used for building purposes near Ryde.

The Bembridge Series.—This is the most important division of the Fluvio-marine Formation. As we go northwards from the chalk we find the high dip of the strata gradually to decrease until the Bembridge Beds are nearly horisontal; as a consequence of this they occupy a large surface area, forming the greater portion of the surface of the Island north of the chalk downs: they consist of 20 feet of soft cream-coloured limestone, overlaid by 40 feet of maris: these two divisions are separated by an oyster bed. The limestone occurs at Binstead, Bembridge, Cowes, Gurnet Bay, Sconce, the upper part of Headon Hill, and running out to sea forms Hempstead Ledge: the quarries at Binstead have been worked for centuries. The most remarkable fossils are the bones of large mammals, chiefly of the genus Palæotherium, a creature resembling the Tapir.

MIOCENE FORMATION.—In considering the Hempstead Beds as belonging to the Miocene Epoch, we follow the classification of Sir Charles Lyell: these strata are 170 feet thick at Hempstead Cliff near Yarmouth, and they also form Parkhurst Forest: at the base is a band of black laminated clay, containing a Miocene shell-Rissoa Chastelii, then come green and brown maris with estuarine shells, and the top 10 feet are of marine origin, containing the shells Corbula pisum and Voluta Rathieri. These beds form a poor soil, usually waste, pasture or woodland.

THE DRIFT.—Of the boulder clay of the Northern and Midland Counties we find no trace in the Isle of Wight, neither are there any traces of the passage of glaciers over its rocks. The gravels, however, which cap the hills on the its rocks. The gravels, however, which cap the fills on the northern side of the Island, are certainly of high antiquity: they occur on Headon Hill (390 feet above the sea), Hempstead Cliff (200 feet) &c. Mr. Codrington has shown that these high-level gravels were once connected, and that they were formed on an old table-land, whose surface sloped to the north: at that time the Isle of Wight was not separated and the Calculus was signed formed. rated from the mainland, and the Solent was a river flowing into the sea somewhere near Spithead, and of which the Test, the Medina &c. were tributaries: the high-level gravels were deposited in the estuary of this river, and the land has since undergone a considerable elevation. Of later date are the brick-earths and mark at Tollands Bay, Wootton Creek, Brook Chine and the Foreland. In beds of sand and peat at Brook and also near Bembridge Point trunks of trees and hazel-nuts have been found; the latter are called "Noah's nuts" by the natives: in the gravels at Freshwater Gate teeth of the Mammoth (an extinct species of elephant) have been found.

PRE-HISTORIC MAN .- But few traces of those early dwellers in our islands who were unacquainted with the use of metals have occurred in the Isle of Wight: in a bed of brick-earth at the Foreland, about 80 feet above the sea, Mr. Codrington found an ovate Palæolithic flint implement, about 4 inches long by 3 in width: of the later, or Neolithic Stone Age, there is a polished flint celt or axe-head, five inches long, in the British Museum, labelled "from the Isle of Wight."

ARRETON is the largest parish in the island, in North-Wight and diocese of Winchester, 3 miles south-east from Newport and 8 south-west from Ryde; the village consists of a long straggling street. The church of St. George is an ancient edifice, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and tower containing 4 bells, and contains some handsome monuments to the Holmes family; the chancel has been restored, at a cost of more than £1,000. The register dates from the year 1655. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £320, with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late John Fleming equ. and held by the Rev. John Graham Packer M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. Serle's charity of £50 yearly is for bread. The "Dairyman's Daughter," eulogised by the Rev. Leigh Richmond, was born in the village, and is interred in the churchyard. The view of Arreton Vale, from the down of the same name, is very pictureaque; on the down are two large barrows, where some Roman armour was discovered some time since. The some Roman armour was discovered some time since. Cornelles, an ancient county family, had a manor (Wootton) in this parish, which retains the name of Combley. The principal landowners are the trustees of John Fleming esq. who are lords of the manor, and Charles W. Martin esq. The soil is loamy; subsoil, green and. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans. The area is 9,188 acres; rateable value, £13,988; the population in 1871 was 1,910.

Parish Clerk, William Orchard.

Haven Street, a station on the Ryde, Newport and Cowes railway, 4 miles north, is a hamlet and ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1853 out of the parishes of Arreton and Ryde. In 1852 St. Peter's, a small stone church, was built here; it consists of chancel, nave, turret and 1 bell. The register dates from the year 1853. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £50, in the gift of the Rev. Frederick Kent, and held since 1879 by the Rev. Augustine David Crake B.A. The nonelation in 1871 was 390. The population in 1871 was 390.

Monks Bay,

BONCHURCE is a parish in East Medina liberty and rural deanery, Winehester diocese and archdeaconry of the Isle of Wight, on the coast, about 11 miles from Ryde and adjoining Ventnor on the east. The old church is an ancient small structure, which is now disused, except for burials, a new church [St. Bosiface] having been built near it in 1848 by subscription: it is a stone building in the buriais, a new church [St. Boniface] having been built near it in 1848 by subscription: it is a stone building in the Norman style, consisting of chancel, nave, transepts and turnet with 1 bell, and contains sittings for about 400 persons. The register dates from the year 1778. The living is a rectory, yearly value about £150, in the gift of trustees and held by the Rev. Henry John Maddock M.A. late Fellow of Warnester College. Oxford The rectory house is also and Worcester College, Oxford. The rectory house is pleasantly situated near the new church and is a modern building. The school-house and teacher's residence were erected about the same time as the church. The Pulpit Rock, which is 400 feet above the sea, is an interesting and striking feature, surmounted by a rude cross. East Dene, the seat of John Snowdon Henry esq. D.L., J.P. is an Elizabethan building, picturesquely situated amid undulating pleasure grounds, on the site of an ancient landslip: the mansion, which commands extensive views of the English Channel, contains some interesting portraits of James Land his family, Sir Philip Sydney, the Countess of Hunsden and a curiously earved organ, by Hoff heimer, date 1592, which belonged to Queen Elizabeth: on the estate are the remains of a Roman eamp, near which a quantity of human bones were found in 1865, the teeth in excellent preservation. Monks he where the first Christian monks landed in A.D. 755, for the Abbey of Lire, in Normandy, is situated, just below the mansion. The Rev. James White, a celebrated anther, resided here; and the Rev. Mr. Adams, author of many valuable works, was baried in the old churchyard. Miss valuable works, was baried in the old churchyard. Miss R. Sewell, the well-known authoress resides here. This village is a favourite resort for invalide during the winter, on account of the general dryness and salebrity of the climate and the midness of the temperature, it being completely sheltered from the north by loky cliffs: It is warm in the winter and cool in the summer. The principal landowners are John Snowdon Heavy esq. D.L., J.P. and Col. Atherley J.P. The soil is chiefly chalk; subsoil, limestone on a gault base. The area is 561 acres; rateable value, £4,158; the normalistics in 1871 was 641 the population in 1871 was 641. Sexton, Henry Jeffery.

BRADING is a large parish, and station on the Isle of Wight railway, in the East Medina liberty and rural deanery, archdeacoury of the Isle of Wight, Winchester diocese, situated 8 miles east from Newport and 4 south from Ryde, at the head of Brading Harbour, an inlet covering several hundred acres, a muddy flat at low water, the state of th but at full tide it has the appearance of a beautiful lake, nearly enclosed by gentle slopes, clothed to the water's edge with wood. Sir Hugh Myddelton expended £7,000 in an unsuccessful attempt to confine the waters. A line of railway is in course of construction from the station here to St. Helen's, which will cross the upper part of the harbour, part of which will be drained. Brading was incorporated long prior to the date of its charter, and is governed by two bailiffs and sixteen assistants, annually chosen at a court-leet held on or before the 9th of October. The church of lest held on or before the 9th of October. The church of St. Mary is an ancient structure, with chancel, chancel, sisles, neve, and aisles, with spire: the roof is supported by massive Norman pillars: the nave is chiefly Norman: it contains several handsome monuments, with recumbent figures, to the Oglander family: this venerable building, the fundation—stone of which was laid in the year 704, has been thoroughly restored, at the expense of the late Sir Henry and Lady Oglander: there are four stained windows; two contain the armorial bearings of the Oglander and Leeds families from the earliest un to the present period: two contain the armorial bearings of the Oglander and Leeds families from the earliest up to the present period; the one at the east end is a representation of The Nativity, Resurrection, and Ascension of Our Saviour; the figures are exceedingly beautiful, and at the foot is the following inscription, "I go to prepare a place for you:" a stained window has also been placed in the tower on the west side, the cit of Ma Thomas Hallers are hitest of Rude, under the gift of Mr. Thomas Hellyer, architect, of Ryde, under whose direction the alterations were effected: an east window has been given by Lady Oglander, representing The Transfiguration, in memory of Sir Henry Oglander bart. The register dates from the year 1547. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £250, with residence, in the gift of Trinity College, Cambridge, and held by the Rev. John Glover M.A. of that college. Here are Bible Christian Congregational and Wesleyan chapels. Brading, Nunwell, and Ashey Downs continue the lofty chain of midland hills westward: on the conspicuous summit of the last named is a stone pyramid, 20 feet high, erected as a sea-mark: towards its foot is Nunwell, the seat of Lady Oglander, a handsome mansions, situated in a well wooded park. The charities for distribution amount to £18 lcs. vearly. Lady Oglander, who owns the manor, and Sir Graham W. E. Hamond-Græme bart, are the principal landowners. The soil is sandy loam; subsoil, sand and clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, and outs. The area is 8,239 acres of are wheat, barley, and oats. CALBOURNE is a parish in the West Medina liberty and rural deanery, Winchester diocese and archdeaconry of the Isle of Wight, situated about 5 miles west-by-south from Newport and 5 south-east from Yarmouth. This parish includes the ancient chapelry and borough of NewTown.

The church of All Saints is in the Pointed style and consists of charge leaves the provided with the provided was annulled by the Reform of chancel, nave, south aisle, north transept and square tower. The register dates from the year 1599. The living is a rectory, yearly value £539, with residence and 72 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Bishop of Winchester and held by the Rev. John Vicars M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge. The principal seats are—Swainstone, the seat of Sir John Stephen Barrington Simeon bart. D.L., J.P. a handsome square stone building, in the Italian style, most delightfully situated; and Westover, the seat of Octavius Moulton-Barrett esq. a handsome modern villa, situated on a gentle declivity at the foot of the Calbourne Downs. The lord of the manor is Sir John Stephen Barrington Simeon bart. D.L., J.P. who is also principal landowner. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, peas and beans. The parish (including Newtown) comprises about 5,529 acres of clay and chalky soil, which is highly cultivated; rateable value, £5,024; the population in 1871 was, including Newtown, 644.

Newtown, formerly a chapelry in this parish, was, in 1872, separated therefrom and, with part of Shalfleet, formed into an ecclesiastical parish; it lies to the north, on the Solent, about 7 miles west from Newport and 5 east from Yarmouth. Although now a small village, it was anciently a town of some importance, called Francheville, the ground still showing evidences of two long streets running east and west, and connected by other shorter streets running north

CARISBROOKE is a parish and village pleasantly of Winchester, situated on the banks of a rivulet and at the foot of the £2,011. The C Castle Hill, closely adjoining Newport and 8 miles south-west from Ryde, in the rural deanery of West Medina, diocese of Winchester and archdeaconry of the Isle of Wight. The church of St. Mary is large and handsome, but was once much larger, the chancel and north siale having been once much larger, the chancel and north aisle having been pulled down to save the cost of repairing them: the nave and south aisle, of equal height, are separated by a plain Transition Norman arcade: there are some interesting monuments: the pulpit bears the date 1658: the tower is a soble structure of the Perpendicular style, with an enriched staircase turret and crocketted pinnacles, and contains a peal of 8 bells: this church, with several of the other island churches, belonged to the Cistercian priory which was founded by William Fitz-Osborn, the prime favourite and counsellor of William the Conqueror; nothing remains of the priory. The register dates from the year 1577. The living is a vicarage, with the chapelry of Northwood annexed, gross yearly value £1,162, with residence and 53 acres of gross yearly value £1,162, with residence and 53 acres of globe, in the gift of Queen's College, Oxford, and was, with other pieces of preferment, given to that society by Charles I.; the Rev. Edward Boucher James M.A. late fellow and tutor of that college, is the vicar. Great interest attaches to Carisbrooke, from its castle, which is supposed to have been a fortress previous to the Roman conquest; but the first time it is mentioned is in the year 530, when it was taken by Cedric the Saxon: its present appearance, however, evinces a Norman renewal: the outworks, or the latest fortifications, were added by Queen Elizabeth: what attaches peculiar interest to this castle is the circumstance of its having been the place of confinement of King Charles I. who during fourteen months was captive in the hands of the Parliament; on the north side of the ruins is shown what is said to have been the bedchamber of the king, and the window from which he attempted his escape: after his death, his children succeeded him as occupants of the same prison; and here the young Princess Elizabeth died, and was interred near the communion table in Newport chapel: the keep, an irregular polygon, about 60 feet in its greatest breadth, is raised on an artificial mound between 50 and 60 feet high, near the north-cust angle of the area, and is entered by an ascent of 72 steps: near the centre of the area is a well 300 feet in depth, cut through the solid rock, supposed to have been the work of the Romans; it contains 90 posed to have been the work of the avoidance, by the labours feet of water, which is very pure, and raised by the labours of an ass upon a treadwheel: the view from the sammit of an assument of meaning the whole or an assupon a treatwheel: the view from the summit of the massive walls embraces a circuit of nearly the whole island, and every variety of landscape: northwards it extends from the pretty village at the foot, over Newport, and along the sparkling course of the Medina, to the Solent, bounded by the New Forest and the Portsdown hills: the castle is the property of the Crown, and the public are admitted on the psyment of 4d. each person. Here are the admitted on the payment of 4d. each person. Here are the remains of a Roman villa, on the south slope of the Hill, to the left of the village street: the remains are of a highly interestleft of the village street: the remains are of a highly interesting character, and in good preservation; they comist of mosaic pavements with a semicircular bath, covering a space of about 120 feet by 50. St. Nicholas chapel, within the waits of Carisbrooke Castle, with its lands, once belonged to Quarr Abbey. St. Nicholas-in-the-Castle is a parish, partly within the borough of Newport. The living is a sinecure, gross income £24, in the gift of the Governor of the Island and held by the Rev. WEST COWES is a thriving town, scaport, railway station, and polling place for the county, in the parish of Northwood, Winchester diocese, archdeaconry of the Isle of Wight and West Medina rural deanery, 11½ miles southsouth-east from Southampton, 4½ north from Newport and 10 west-south west from Portsmonth seated on the de-12 west-south-west from Portsmouth, seated on the de-clivity of the hill on the western side of the river Medina, which separates it from East Cowes, and is crossed by a steam ferry: it is a populous place and many handsome houses and villas have been erected in various parts of the nouses and villas have been erected in various parts of the town. The town is not incorporated, but is regulated by the Health of Towns Act and a Local Board of Health of 15 members has been formed. Gas was introduced in 1845 and a water company formed in 1847; the water works are now owned by the Local Board. The attractions of yachting and the convenience of bathing have occasioned it to become the record. come the resort of much fashionable company: the baths and machines are situated near the castle. Cowes Castle is now let on lease by the Government to the Royal Yacht Squadron and used by them as their club house. Cowes is the principal port in the island, and is both safe and conwenient, the roads affording excellent shelter in severe weather, the anchorage being so good that ships seldom drift: from its excellent roadstead, ships can directly steer either west or east. Most of the Transatlantic steamers call at this port for the landing and embarkation of passengers: the trade carried on is extensive, particularly in provisions for shipping. The steamboat quay and pler were built by G. H. Ward esq.; the Southampton and Iale of Wight Steam Boat Company are the lessees. In the Medina road is a commodious legal wharf and quay, designated the Medina Commercial Wharf, with storehouses and bonding warehouses for general merchandise; here is extensive quay accommodation, furnishing at all times a ready means of disaccommodation, furnishing at all times a ready means of discharging and loading ships of almost any burthen in perfect security: a pier has been constructed at this wharf for the purpose of landing and embarking troops. The Cowes and Newport railway was opened in 1862. For ecclesiastical purposes West Cowes is divided into two parishes, formed in 1832 out of the parish of Northwood. St. Mary's church, rebuilt in 1867, is a handsome edifice of Swansea rubble, with Bath stone dressings, and consists of chancel, nave and aisles, tower and a porch, and contains a very handwith Bath stone dressings, and consists of chancel, nave and aisles, tower and a porch, and contains a very handsoniely carved reredos given by Mr. Pascall Atkey and a fine organ presented by the late Miss Ward and Mrs. Beckford: many of the windows are stained: it contains 960 sittings, 200 of which are free: the cost of the building was £6,000. The register dates from the year 1657. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £160, in the gift of the vicar of Carisbrooke and held by the Rev. William Barker M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford, and Hon. Chaplain in ordinary to Her Majesty; £20 yearly was left by Bishop Morley for a lecturer, on condition that £40 was raised by subscription; it goes to the benefit of the vicar of St. Mary. Holy Trinity church was erected in 1832, at the sole expense of the late church was erected in 1832, at the sole expense of the late Mrs. S. Goodwin: it was enlarged in 1862, by the addition of a chancel: it now consists of chancel, nave and tower: at the east end is a small stained window: it has 700 sittings, half of which are free. The register dates from the year 1833. The living is a vicarage, yearly value about £250, in the gift of J. S. Galliatt esq. and held by the Rev. John Douglas Middleton M.A. of Corpus Christi college, Oxford. The Catholic chapel, in Carvel lane, is a large brick building, with residence attached; the Rev. Joseph Bower, priest. The Congregational chapel is in Union road, erected in 1804; the Baptist chapel, Victoria road, erected in 1877; the Bible Christian chapel, Cross street, erected in 1858; the Primitive Methodists', Market hill, erected in 1858; church was erected in 1832, at the sole expense of the late the Wesleyan, Birmingham road, erecte in 1831; the Free Wesleyans, St. Mary's street, built in 1853; the Primitive Free Methodist, Gurnard, erected in 1869. There are large and commodious schools in York street, erected in 1862-3; and commodious sensois in York street, erected in 1802-5; also a large mixed National school in Cross street. A public cemetery was opehed in 1855: it is situated on the Newport road, about half a mile from the town; the area of the enclosure is about 4½ acres: it less two mortuary chapels: a portion of the ground has been set apart for Catholics. The Capital and Counties Bank and the London and County Bank have branches here. There are three good hotels, the "Fountain," in the High street, and the "Glo'ster" and the"Marine," on the Parade: there are also many respectable inns, and good lodging houses. The "Isle of Wight Herald' is published here on Saturday by Mr. J. Hall Smith, High street. A recreation ground was given to the town by W. G. Ward esq. in 1859; it covers an area of 9 acres: also a very beautiful piece of ground called " Princes Green, was presented to the town in 1864, by George Robert Stephenson esq.; this delightful promenade is close to the sea, and upwards of 1,000 feet in length; the green is provided with eixteen iron sittings, a band stand and a hand-some drinking fountain. There are some beautiful walks and drives in the neighbourhood, and some lovely scenery. The principal establishments are the docks and shipbuilding The principal establishments are the docks and shipbuilding yards of Mr. John White: these consist of two docks, Medina and Thetis, of the respective lengths of 330 feet and 140 feet, and 17 and 13 feet over sill; a patent slipway, and four building slips of nearly equal extent: the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company's ships: "Medina" and "Solent," of 1,800 tons, were built here; as also several of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Company's ships; likewise many steamers of various sizes and many men of war, for the British and foreign navies; some of the Peninsular and Oriental Company's ships have been lengthened here, including the "Tay," and many belonging to the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company. In connection with the above premises is a large hoat building establishment for building premises is a large hoat building establishment for building life boats for Her Majesty's Navy: by a novel arrangement they will also form the bridges of the ships, and the "Tamar" and "Orontes," two of our largest troopships, have been thus fitted with boats capable of earrying 200 men, by order of the Lords of the Admiralty. There are likewise the extensive ship and yeach building establishments of Mesers. Chas. Hansen and Sons, who have also slipways. There is a brass and iron foundry, conslucted by Mesers. W. White and Sons. The extensive ropery of Mr. Bannister also deserves notice, from its having been the first for the manufacture of wire rope: sail-making is also carried on extensively by Mr. C. Ratsey and Mesers. Summers and Hewitt. The oyster fisheries in the Medina and Newtown rivers are formed into a company, called the Isle of Wight Oyster oyster fisheries in the Medina and Newtown rivers are formed into a company, called the Isle of Wight Oyster Flahery Company Limited; the chief office is at Tower House, West Cowes. W. G. Ward esq. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is loamy; subsoil, clay and gravel. The area and rateable value are included in Northwood. The population of the town in 1871 was 5,957, viz. Holy Trinity, 2,489; St. Mary's, 3,468.

GURNARD is a village to the west of Cowes, overlooking Gurnet Bay; it consists of a few handsome villas. All Saints' School church was erected in 1863, at a cost of £560, raised by subscriptions: it is a small brick building, with 150 sittings. The living is attached to Holy Trinity, West Cowes. Here are a chapel for Primitive Methodists, and a wall selve. small achool.

FRESHWATER is an extensive parish in the liberty and rural deanery of West Medina, archdeaconry of the Isle of Wight and Winchester diocese, 12 miles west from Newport, 14 south-west from Cowes and 2 south from Yarmouth, in the extreme west of the island. The church of mouth, in the extreme west of the island. The church of All Saints consists of chancel, nave, transepts, aisles and square embattled tower containing 2 bells. The register dates from the year 1576. The living is a rectory, yearly value £710, with residence and 6 acres of glebe, in the gift of St. John's college, Cambridge, and held since 1839 by the Rev. John Frederick Issacson B.D. late fellow and tutor of the College and becomes acres of Wischester. of that College, and honorary canon of Winchester. There are chapels for Wesleyans, Baptists and Bible Christians. Holme's charity of £9 18s. 10d. vearly is for bread, and partly given in Bibles and prayer books to the children of the National school; Squire's Charity of £3 yearly is for distribution. Freshwater is much resorted to in summer as a marine bathing place, on account of its pure atmosphere, its remarkable cliffs and caverns, and its beautiful land and sea views: it stands on an estuary, formed by the mouth of the little river Yar, which, being at its source separated only by a narrow isthmus of pebbles from the small creek called Freshwater Gate, in the centre of Freshwater Bay, on the opposite coast, cuts off this angle of the island, which, in consequence, was formerly called the lale of Freshwater. There are two commodious hotels at Freshwater Bay and There are two commodious hotels at Freshwater Bay and one at Alum Bay, and one in course of construction to be opened in 1880, at Totland Bay. Several enchanting situations within Weston manor and Norlands have been chosen as the sites of villas, among which are Westhill, Norton Lodge, Afton House, the Marina, Farringford Hill and Alum Bay Cottage. The cliffs, which bound the whole average of Freshwater Bay are of strengthers help the and extent of Preshwater Bay, are of stupendous height, and afford beautiful views from their summits: the prospect from the Lighthouse, on the highest and extreme western point of the cliff, 600 feet perpendicular above the level of the sea, is exceedingly magnificent, and includes a full view of the Needles: on the other side, within a short distance west of the mouth of the Yar, where the estury meets the sea, and nearly opposite Hurst Castle, on the Hampshire coast, these cliffs commence; from that point they skirt the length of Totland Buy and Alum Bay westward, gradually increasing in height till, at the lighthouse, they meet the ridge from the southern side; then stretching out into the sea in broken crags, disjointed from the main-land by the force of the waves, they form those singular rocks called the Needles, of which the highest, being wholly undermined by the sea, fell many years ago, and totally disappeared; the remaining three rocks are tipped by a number of jagged points, resembling the grinders of an enormous jaw: the entire range of these cliffs, when viewed from the sea, is beautiful: in some places they are perpendicular, in others they project over the sea in a tremendous manner: they are frequented, particularly from May to August, by a prodigious number of aquatic birds, who deposit their eggs among the crevices of the shelving strata at a great height: the country people take the birds thus harbouring by the perilous expedient of descending by ropes fixed to iron bars driven into the ground, and while thus suspended beat them down with sticks as they fly out of their holes. Several caverns and deep chasms in these rocks seem to penetrate a considerable way within them; in many places the issuing springs form small cascades of water rippling down to the sea. A very remarkable natural cave is situated near Freshwater Gate: the principal entrance forms a rugged segment of a circle, about 20 feet high and 35 wide; it runs into the rock about 120 feet; this entrance can only be approached at low water, and even then the jutting crags and lofty fragments of rock that obstruct the passage render the access very difficult. At some distance to the eastward, about 500 yards from the shore, are two insulated rocks, through one of which the waves have formed an opening, resembling a picturesque arch. Some very extensive Government Forts have been erected here. Farringford Hill is the seat of Alfred Tennyson D.C.L. the poet laureate. Lord Heytesbary is lord of the manor of Freshwater; William George Ward esq. of the manor of Weston; Alfred Tennyson esq. of the manors of Priors & Kings; Benjamin Cotton esq. of the manor of West Afton. The principal landowners are the lords of the manors. The soil is sand and gravel; when the contract of the principal contract of the manors. subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats &c. The area is 4,836 acres of land and 205 foreshore and water; rateable value, £12,230; the population in 1861 was 1,678, and in 1871, 2,638, including 422 in the fortifications.

EASTON is a tithing, a mile and a half south; MIDDLE-TON, a tithing, a mile and a half south-west; WESTON, a tithing, 2 miles south-west; NORTON, a tithing, 2 miles

TOTLAND BAY is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1875 from Freshwater parish. Christ church, built in 1875, is in the Early English style, and consists of chancel and nave with turret and 1 bell. The register dates from the year 1875. The living is a perpetual curacy, yearly value £30, in the gift of the Church Patronage Society and held by the Rev. Raymond Blathwayt B.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge. Weston Manor, the residence of William George Ward esq. is a large handsome stone building situated on a hill, and commands extensive views of the Solent and inland scenery; attached to the house is a very beautiful Catholic chapel with stained windows and altar piece, representing the Burial of our Lord: the services are open to the public. A Catholic school is being crected, and will be partly under Government inspection. A National school is also being crected. There is a large hotel at Alum Bay. A very commodiana hotel is also hotel at Alum Bay. A very commodious hotel is also being erected, to be called the "Totland Bay Hotel," and to be called the "Totland Bay Hotel," and the constructed in be opened in 1880; a new pier is also being constructed in connection with it.

NEWPORT.

NewPORT is an ancient borough and well built market and railway town, and a polling place for the county, in West Medina rural deanery, Winchester diocese and archdeaconry of the Isle of Wight, situated in the centre of the island, on 7 miles south-west from Ryde, 5 south from Cowes on the / miles south-west from Nion on the southern coast of the island, 12 east from Freshwater at its western, and 12 west from St. Helen's at its eastern extremity. The great superiority of its situation over Carisbrooke for trade appears to have been the cause of its rising into importance, on the decay of the former more ancient town. Camden mentions Newport thus:—"Newport, the principal merceate toune of the whole isle, in times past Medena and Novus Begus de Meden," that is, the New Burgh of Meden. It stands on a pleasant eminence, watered on its east side by the Medina river, and on the west by the Lukeley, a small stream which falls into the Medina at the quay. On account of its central position, it is often chosen as the head quarters of travellers wishing to visit all the most attractive parts of the island, for which it is particularly convenient, and itself the island, for which it is particularly convenient, and itself a most eligible residence. This flourishing town is incorporated by Act of Parliament, and by a charter of James I. the governing charter was granted 13 Charles II.; it comprises the parish of Newport, and parts of the parishes of Carisbrooke, Northwood, St. Nicholas and Whippingham: its corporation consists of a mayor, 6 aldermen and 18 councillors. Before the Municipal Reform Act the corporation consisted of a mayor, a recorder, 12 chief burgesses, 11 aldermen, self-elected, and freemen, of whom there seemed not to have been any definite number: it returned two members to Parliament, but by the "Representation of the People Act. 1867." the number was reduced to one, and the People Act, 1867," the number was reduced to one, and by the "Boundary Act, 1868," the Parliamentary borough was extended by the addition of certain other portions of the parishes of Carisbrooke and Whippingham. The county magiatrates for the Isle of Wight division meet at the Town hall every saturday at 12; petty sessions for the borough are held at the same place every Monday at 11.

The town consists of five principal streets, running east and west, and crossed at right angles by three others, and is well naved and lighted.

well paved and lighted.

The Cowes and Newport Railway was opened to Cowes in 1862. A line of rail from Newport to Ryde was completed in 1875; and another from Newport to Sandown was opened on February 1st, 1875, and connected with the two former

The church of St. Thomas the Apostle has been rebuilt: the foundation stone was laid by his Royal Highness Prince Albert on the 24th day of August, 1854; the new church is a highly enriched specimen of the Early Decorated style, deserving of admiration for the excellence of its proportions and for the gracefulness and elaborate character of its sculptured decorations: it consists of a chancel with north sculpured decorations: it consists of a chancel with north and south chaples, a clerestoried nave, with gabled alsies, and vestry, north and south porches, and a lofty, well-proportioned tower at the west end containing a peal of 8 belis: the interior is lofty and noble, well befitting the principal church of the island: the roof is open, of timber, with moulded ribs and sculptured corbels: a splendid monument (by Marochetti) to the memory of the Prince Consort was alseed in the church by the mayor, vicar, churchwarders. (by Marochetti) to the memory of the Prince Consort was placed in the church by the mayor, vicar, churchwarders and other inhabitants: there are two very beautiful stained windows, the gift of her Majesty and the Prince Consort: the east window is a magnificent work of art, by Holland, of Warwick: the vault of Elizabeth, second daughter of Charles I. which was discovered in 1793, is near the communion table: a stone, with the initials E. S., marked the laif after her father was beheaded: a beautiful monument of white marble (a recumbent figure), was placed in the new church to the memory of this princess by her Majesty Queen Victoria, in 1856: there is in the church also a monument to Sir Edward Horsey, captain of the Isle of Wight, who cied in 1582: it contains a very fine organ; the pulpit is a piece of beautiful workmanship, bearing the date of 1856. The register dates from the early part of the 14th century. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £150, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Winchester, and held by the Rev. George Henry Connor M.A. of Trinit's College, Dublin, rural dean, canon of Winchester and chaplain to the Queen.

St. John the Baptist is an ecclesiastical parish, formed in 1836; the church, in St. John's road, on the south-west side of the town, is in Carisbrooke parish: it is of stone, in the Early English style, erected in 1837, at a cost of about £1.500, raised by subscriptions and grants, and consists of chancel and nave, and has 800 sittings, one-third of which are free: the chancel windows are stained: it contains a moument in memory of the Rev. W. C. Wilson, erected in 181 by the non-commissioned officers and privates of the arm. The register dates from the year 1838. The living is a starage, yearly value £35, in the gift of and held by the Rev. Richard Hollings B.A. of St. John's College, Oxford. The population in 1871 was 3,428.

The population in 1871 was 3,426.

The Congregational chapel, in Upper St. James street, was built in 1804, and has about 500 sittings. The Congregational chapel, in Lower St. James street, is a handsome stone building, and will seat about 500 persons.

The Baptist chapel, in High street, is a brick building, exected in 1812, at a cost of about £2,000.

The Catholics, Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists, and Univarians have also chapels here. The Bible Christians have a handsome new chapel with spire, spacious school and that moment in Onav atreet.

suct: she, as well as her royal parent, was confined in conducted hotel, and several good inns. At Dodnor, about 2 miles north of the town, are the extensive cement works of balfafter her father was beheaded: a beautiful monument Charles Francis, Son & Co., of 17 Gracechurch street, Charles Francis, Son & Co., of 17 Gracechurch street, London, who employ here a large number of hands in the manufacture of Portland and Medina cements.

The market days are on Saturdays and alternate Wednes-days; the corn market is held every Saturday. There are three days (Saturdays), those nearest Michaelmas, called Bargain Saturdays, when young men and women assemble in the town and at the register offices, offering themselves as servants for the year.

A good trade exists here in timber and malt, and a large quantity of wheat and flour is exported. The chief trade of the town consists of the general supply of articles connected with subsistence and comfort to the villages around, and Parkhurst barracks close by.

The Literary Institution, in Quay street, is a handsome building, erected in 1810: it has a large and well-supplied news room and valuable library.

Parkhurst Barracks, capable of receiving 2,000 soldiers, and Carisbrooke Castle, are each a mile from the town.

The villas in the neighbourhood, as in every part of this

The villas in the neighbournood, as in every part of this beautiful island, are situated amongst enchanting scenery.

The area of the parish is 58 acres; rateable value, £14,868; the population of the parish in 1871 was 3,556; the municipal population, 7,956; parliamentary, 8,522.

St. Paul's church is a stone edifice in the Norman style, erected in 1844, at a cost of £2,040: it consists of nave and alsles, with shingle tower and 2 bells and has 400 sittings, half of which are free: its site was given by C. W. Martin esq. The register dates from the year 1844. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £200, in the gift of the rector of Whippingham and held by the Rev. William Leggatt Sharpe M.A. who has a handsome parsonage house, situated at Staplers, built in 1857, at a cost of £850, given by C. W. Martin esq. £10 from Shedden's charity is distributed yearly. The principal landowners are W. B. Mew esq. and W. Major Cook. The area is 1,026 acres; and the population in 1871 was 1,211.

SCHOOLS.

The Free Grammar School, in Lower St. James street, was founded by subscription in 1614, & endowed by Sir Richard Worsley, Sir Thomas Fleming & others: the school house possesses interesting historical associations: in one of the rooms Charles I. slept, & in the school-room he met the commissioners sent by Parliament to treat with him, September 18th, 1648. The master teaches 30 free scholars & is allowed to take other day scholars as well as boarders. The present master is the Rev. Edward William Watts M.A. formerly exhibitioner of Lincoln College, Oxford, graduate in double honours

granuse in course indicates

The Bise School, or Girls' Charity School, in Lugley street, was founded by subscription in 1761, for the purpose of clothing & teaching a number of poor girls of Newport & qualifying them to be honest & useful domestic servants.

The girls are educated, clothed, boarded, & lodged at the expense of the charity; Mrs. Catherine Bunce, mistress

NITON is an extremely pretty village and parish, in East Medina liberty and rural deanery, Winchester diocese, and archdeaconry of the Isle of Wight, 5 miles west from Ventnor, and 8½ south from Newport, beautifully situated at the south-west angle of the island, and considered one of the most romantic spots in the Undercliff district. Here are several mansions and many lodging houses, having fine views of the sea. The church of St. John the Baptist is built of freestone, and consists of nave and sides, the latter ancient, the former added on the site of an ancient one in 1864, with a square tower and short spire, and contains 2 bells: it is of great antiquity, and was one of those given by William Fitz-Osborae to his Abbey of Lyra, in Normandy: bells: it is of great antiquity, and was one of those given by William Fitz-Osborne to his Abbey of Lyra, in Normandy: the church came to the Crown at the Dissolution of the church came to the Crown at the Dissolution of religious houses, and was, with five other churches in Hampshire, given to Queen's College, Oxford, by Charles I. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a rectory, yearly value £368, with 19 acres of glebe, in the gift of Queen's College, Oxford, and held by the Rev. George Hayton M.A. and formerly fellow of that college. Near the church are the steps of an ancient cross, upon which a shaft was erected in 1874, from designs furnished by Joseph Clarke F.S.A. The Baptists and Wesleyans have each a chapel here. There is a Mechanics' Institute and Reading Room. Charities of £37 value are distributed yearly. A considerable part of the parish is in the Undercliff. At the Coast Guard station, in this parish, the yearly. A considerable part of the parish is in the Under-cliff. At the Coast Guard station, in this parish, the rocket apparatus for saving life from shipwreck is kept. On St. Catherine's Point, near Niton, is the lighthouse of the same name: it was commenced in 1838, and finished in 1840: it is a handsome stone tower, 101 feet in height to the turret, and 125 feet to the top of the lanthorn; a Fog Horn is situated near the Lighthouse, worked by hot air.

RYDE is a large and handsome town, municipal borough, railway station, polling place for the county, and a parish in North-east Medina rural deanery, archdeacoary of the Iale of Wight, diocese of Winchester, 7 miles east-north-east from Newport, 5 south-by-west from Portsmouth and 79 from London, beautifully situated on the slope of a hill reaching to the shores of the Solent water, whence the vessels at Spithead, Portsmouth, Stokes Bay and the Mother Bank are seen. Ryde may be considered of modern date—a hundred years ago it was a small village: the heauty of a hundred years ago it was a small village: the beauty of its site has caused it to become a fashionable watering place: in consequence tasteful villas and noble mansions have been built in every direction.

The principal streets are very open and well paved, regularly arranged, most of them crossing each other nearly at right angles: several of the handsomest run parallel, almost in a direct line to the beach, thus affording an interesting

Here are many elegant dwellings, surrounded with beau-tiful pleasure grounds, which adorn almost every street in the town, within a convenient distance of the baths and

The pier is a delightful promenade: it is of timber, and extends from the quay to low-water mark—a distance of nearly balf-a-mile: it was opened in 1814, but since then it has received repeated additions of no less than 1,000 feet:
in 1864 a tramway with a double line of rails was laid down the whole length of the pier, and in 1871 extended to the ble of Wight railway station at St. John's road, for the con-

vevance of passengers in covered carriages drawn by horses: there is also an extensive esplanade, affording a carriage drive of nearly a mile in front of the sea and the footpath extends to Sea View, 3 miles east, where there is good bathing

The Railway station is in St. John's road, whence passengers are conveyed by the tramway to the extreme end of the pier: the railway passes by Brading, Sandown and Shanklin to Ventnor, and a branch was opened on February Shanklin to Ventnor, and a branch was opened on February 1st, 1875, from Sandown to Newport: there is another line from Ryde to Newport direct. The joint committee of the London and South Western and London, Brighton and South Coast Railway Companies have carried out works of great magnitude, which will enable the traveller to step direct from the trains into the boats at Stokes Bay, at Portsmouth and at Ryde: at Ryde this involved a pier half-a-mile long, by the side of the existing pur, and a tunnel under part of the town: owing to the depth of the silt deposit under the pier and the treacherous nature of the soil through which the tunnel had to be driven, this undertaking was attended the tunnel had to be driven, this undertaking was attended with great difficulties which the chief resident engineers of the two companies have successfully overcome, assisted by their representative on the works, Mr. Ernest Benedict M.I.C.E.: the works, whereby the appearance both of the pier-head and of the foreshore at Ryde are wonderfully im-

the summer months and from eight to ten times aday in the winter: also to Cowes and Southampton, with eccasional execusions entirely round the island.

The municipal borough was incorporated in 1868, and comprises most of the parish of Ryde and a small portion of St. Helen's parish, and is divided into east and west wards: the corporation consists of a mayor, six aldermen and eighteen councillors.

The town is lighted with gas and paved, under an Act of Parliament obtained in 1829: this Act was amended in 1847, under which the jurisdiction of the roads within the town was transferred from the Commissioners of Highways to the Ryde Commissioners: this Act was again amended in 1854, for the purpose of conferring extended sanitary powers, in-cluding a supply of water, and for making the Commissioners an elective instead of a non-elective body: an Act was oban elective instead of a non-elective body; an act was outsined in 1861 for a further supply of water; the town and neighbourhood are now supplied with a constant service of water obtained from Kasghton near Newchareh and Ashey; the police arrangements are under the Corporation.

Ryde was formed into a separate parish in 1866: it formerly was attached to Newchurch, the parish church of which is about 7 miles from Ryde, but was separated by the Act 29 & 30 Vict. cap. ext. The parish church of Ryde (All Saints), strasted in the Queen's road, was designed by the late Sir G. G. Scott R.A. and erected in 1870: it is a magnificent structure in the Decorated Gothic style and consists of chancel, nave, stales, transept, chapel and tower: the length is divided into six bays, which, with their piers, carved capitals and moulded arches, have a magnificent architectural effect: in the chancel are stalls for the clergy and choir: the church is capable of seating about 1,200; the cost of the edifice was about £16,000. The register dates from the year 1870. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £300, in the gift of the Bishep of Winchester and held by the Rev. Alex. Poole M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge.

St. Thomas is a chapel of case to the parish church of Ryde: it is in St. Thomas' street, and was built by the Player family, to whom the building, although consecrated, belongs: it is in the Sarly English style and consists of chancel, nave, aisles and tower with spire: the Rev. William Mark Harrison M.A. of Pembroke College, Cambridge, is curate in charge.

Holy Trinity is an ecclesistical parish, formed in 1846. Holy Trinity church is a noble stone structure, situated on a commanding elevation, and has a tower and spire rising to the height of 156 feet, in the Early English style, and consists of cleancel, nave, sistes and transcpt: the church was built in 1842 at a cost of about £7,200, and has 1,050 sit-tings, of which 500 are free: the income is derived entirely from the pew rents. The register dates from the year 1846. The living is a vicarage, in the gift of the vicar of Ryde and held by the Rev. Arthur John Wade M.A. Trinity College, Dublin. The area is 137 acres; the population in 1871 was 3,674.

St. James' church, in Lind street, was erected in 1829 at a cost of about £6,000, as an Episcopal proprietary chapel: a cost of about 20,000, as an Episcopai proprietary compen. it is a plain building of the Tudor style, and consists of chancel, nave and ables: the window in the chancel is stained: it contains about 1,100 sittings, 300 of which are free; the income is solely derived from pew rents: the Rev. William Henry Redknap is the incumbent.

St. Mary's Catholic chapel, in High street, was erected in 1846: it is a handsome edifice in the Early English style, built at the sole cost of the Counters of Clare: the interior is highly decorated and consists of chancel, mave, sieles, baptistery and three side chapels: over the altar there is a fine picture of The Crucifixion, with St. Mary and St. John, copied from an original in the Sistine chapel at Rome: it also contains a highly-finished picture of The Annuncia-tion; the Rev. John Baptist Cahill is priest.

The Congregational church in George street was erested in 1871, and is in the style of the fourteenth century, built of Swanage stone with Bath stone dressings.

A Baptist chapel (Christ Church) was erected in George street in 1862: the foundation stone was laid by Sir Samuel Morton Peto bart, who largely contributed to the building fund: it is a handsome building in the Early English style, fand: it is a handsome building in the Early English style, and will seat about 600 persons; there is a good school-room at the back of the building.

Park Road Baptist chapel was crected in 1870, and is capable of seating about 500 persons: underneath the chapel is a large room, used for school, lectures and other purposes: the cost of the entire structure was about £1,008.

The Primitive Methodist chapel, Star street, was built in 1841, and enlarged in 1860, now having seats for about 250 persons.

The Wesleyan chapel, Nelson street, was erected in 1842: it is a small building, and is capable of sesting about 400 persons. The Free Wesleyans have a chapel in Highstreet, which was erected in 1886: it will seat about 150 persons.

The Bible Christians' chapel, erected in 1860, is in Newport road, and will seat about 200 persons: there is a minister's residence adjoining.

The Brethren make use of the Town Hall as a place of

The Cemetery, situated in West street, was consecrated in 1842, and bas two mortuary chapels.

In 1850 several of the gentlemen of the Isle of Wight formed a Philosophical and Scientific Society, with a museum for the reception of curiodities in nature and art: the Society has been dissolved, but the massum has been placed in the School of Art.

Ryde Young Men's Christian Association and Literary In-Ryde Young Men's Christian Association and Literary Institute is a handsome building and thriving institution, situated in Lind street. The reading room is supplied with the daily, leeal and religious newspapers, quarterly reviews, and a large number of magazines. The library contains upwards of 7,000 volumes. The cost of the building we £1,000, and it has recontly been enlarged, at an additional avenues of £200. expense of £809.

The Market House and Town Hall is a substantial building, the foundation stone of which was laid in 1830, by John Lind esq. The market days are Tuesday and Friday. The Royal Victoria Areade contains 14 shops and a spacious

Near the sea, in St. Thomas' street, on the west side of the pier, is the Royal Victoria Yacht Club House, a handsome and spacious building, containing a noble suite of rooms: the first stone was laid by his late Royal Highness the Prince Consert, on March 2nd, 1846: in 1864 the Club House was enlarged and much improved: the club regatts takes place in the month of August, the town regatts taking place about a month later.

Here is a theatre, which is open during the summer months.

Ryde has several good hotels: among the most conspicuous may be named the Pier hotel, the Kent hotel, Union street and Sivier's hotel, Pier street. The lodging houses are very numerous.

The Capital and Counties Bank and the National Provincial Bank have branches in Union street

Three newspapers are published in Ryde, 'The Isle of Wight Observer,' the 'Isle of Wight Times,' and the 'Ryde News': all papers give a weekly list of fashionable arrivals, and addresses of the resident families.

The Royal Isle of Wight Infirmary, in Swanmore reed, was erected in 1849, at a cost of upwards of £2,000, and is supported by public subscriptions: the Infirmary was enlarged in 1866, and there are beds for 30 in-patients.

There are three double brick-built almshouses, situate in the Newport road, erected to the memory of Francis Shannoa Wilder esq. by his widow Augusta, 1854.

ST. HELEN'S, with SEA VIEW, SPRING VALE and NETTLESTONE.

St. Helen's is a large parish in the East Medina liberty and rural deanery, Isle of Wight archdeaconry and Winchester diocese, 4 miles south-east from Ryde and 10 east from Newport, finely situated on the bay called St. Helen's Road, much used in time of war as a rendezvous for the Royal Navy. The ancient church of St. Helen was situated close to the sea side, and the churchyard was so much encroached upon by the sea in the beginning of the last century as to endanger the church, which was pulled down, part of the tower, which is still standing, being left as a sea mark: the church was re-built in 1717, in a more elevated situation, and in the year 1831 was again rebuilt: it is a Gothic stone building, with red brick facings, and it is a Gothic stone building, with red brick facings, and consists of chancel, nave and aisles, north and south transept and square tower: the chancel was rebuilt in 1862. The register dates from the year 1653. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £137, in the gift of Eton College to vicarage, yearly value £137, in the gift of Eton College to whom it was given on the dissolution of the priory by Henry VI. and held by the Rev. William Henr, Richards M.A. of Jeaus College, Cambridge. There are chapels for Wesleyans, FreeWesleyans, Bible Christians, Congregational and Primitive Methodists. The charities are £20 yearly. The village, called St. Helen's Green, consisting of stone and thatched cottages, stands about half a mile to the southeast of the church, and as much inland from the sea, near Brading Harbour. The Priory was founded for Cluniac monks, about the year 115ō; the priory property was afterward appropriated by Henry VI. and used by him for the building and endowment of Eton College: it is now the residence of Henley Gross Smith, esq. and is beautifully situated on the shore, commanding delightful views over the Hampshire and Bussex coasts: it stands at the head of a spacious lawn, which gently declines from the house to the brink of a lawn, which gently declines from the house to the brink of a nawn, which gently declines from the house to the brink of a high ridge overhanging the sea, and is covered with wood to the water's edge, through which various pleasant walks have been formed. H. Grose Smith esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Rt. Hon. Sir William Hutt, H. Grose Smith esq. and Samuel William Ridley esq. The soil is chalk; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats and beaus. The arra is 1,896 acres; rateable value. £21,059: the nonvisition in 1871 was 3,419 value, £21,050; the population in 1871 was 3,412.

OAKPIBLD is a hamlet and small village near Ryde.

ST. JOHN'S part of this parish is a suburb of RYDE, which see. SEA VIEW is a pretty village and sea-bathing place, situated at the north-east of the island, with the most exquisite rural scenery, besides beautiful views across the channel of Spithead to Portsmouth directly opposite, with the Sussex coast in the distance: it is 3 miles east from Ryde and a mile north from St. Helen's church. The shore is almost unrivalled for its beauty, and its fine smooth sands render it especially adapted for sea-bathing. A suspension pier is about to be erected. The proprietary chapel was erected in 1859 by voluntary subscription by residents who visit here in the summer: it is a Gothic building, with nave and north aisle, under the pastoral

J.P.; Seafield, of Mrs. Coder; Sea View House, Henry Ford Barciay eaq. and Pairy Hill, the residence of Rev. William Henry Richards M.A. The principal landowners are William Antheny Glynn eq. J. H. Oglander Glynn esq. and Mrs. Conder.

The principal landowners are William Anthony Glyan eq. J. H. Oglander Glyan esq. and Mrs. Conder. Spring Valle is another hamlet, situated between Sea View and Ryde, 2 miles from the latter. The houses in this village are erected along the sea-shore, overlocking the Channel, Ryde pier, Southampton Water, and the Hants and Sussex coasts: to the east are the wooded heights at the back of Sea View; adjacent is St. Clare, the beautiful castellated mansion of Col. Harcourt D.L. and Westridge, the property of Richard Phipps esq. Rathing unschines are provided.

SAINT LAWBENCE is a parish and village on the sea coast, in the East Medina liberty and rural deanery, Winchester diocese and Isle of Wight archdeacoury, 9 miles sonth-south-east from Newport and 2 west from Ventnor. The church of St. Lawrence was built in the reign of Richard I. and enlarged in 1849, and is one of the smallest in England: it is now used as a mortuary chapel. The new church of St. Lawrence was opened August 6th, 1878, and was built by subscription, at a cost of £1,000, and will seat about 300 persons: it is a fine stone building in the Decorated style, by the late Sir Gilbert Scott, and consists of chancel, nave, north alele and north porch, and turret con-taining two bells. The register dates from the year 1678. The living is a rectory, yearly value £120, in the gift of the Hon. Evelyn Pelham and held by the Rev. Clifford Malden M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge; the rectory house was built at a cost of £1,500; there are 17 acres of glebe. The view from the church yard is singularly beautiful and picturesque: the slope of the hill on which the church stands is so great that a road has been cut like a groove : on the opposite side a cliff, some hundred feet high, and nearly perpendicular, towers over head; yet, from the richness of the soil that clings to the rocks they are clothed with clusters of flowers and shrubs, flourishing in the crevices. The Royal National Hospital for Consumption was first originated by Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall and the Right Hon. Sir Lawrence Peel, and built by Ingram and Son, of Ventnor: the patients are placed in a series of houses or villas situated in a vale, well sheltered from unfavourable winds, and have large sitting and separate sleeping rooms: there are sixteen houses in blocks of two, which are all inhabited; each house gives accommodation to at least aix patients, and the expense of building most of them has been defrayed by the several charitable persons whose names they bear: the site and grounds comprise nearly twenty acres, and command a lovely view of both land and sea: the hospitals are alternately for men and women; but for the practical working of the institution it is considered necessary to have two others as subsidiary hospitals—one for men, the other for women, who are either waiting their turns for entrance into the hospital proper, or in whose cases a longer residence is desirable: there is also a chapel and library: during the year 1874 up-wards of two hundred male and female patients were admitted, the average period during which each was retained being ten and a half weeks; the mode of admission is by letters of recommendation, which can be obtained from the governors: each patient is expected to pay ten shillings a week; through the generosity of Mrs. "F. H." however, a fund, called the "Frederick Fund," of £3,000, has been established, and the committee were thus enabled to admit rot less than twelve patients last year without any payment. The Hon. Evelyn Pelham is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is chalky marl, rich is fossils; subsoil, good freestone for building. The crops are the usual cereals. The area is 327 acres, the greater part of which is cereas. The area is 327 acres, the greater part of which is a slip of land forming a part of the romantic tract called the Undercliff; rateable value, £1,376; the parish contained, in 1871, 185 inhabitants.

Letters received through Ventnor, which is the nearest money order office. Wall Box, Old road, cleared at 9.45 a.m. & 4.45 p.m; sundays 9.25 p.m.

SANDOWN is a rapidly improving sea-bathing place, and | lation in 1861 was 1,743, and in 1871, 3,466: the population station on the Isle of Wight railway, and ecclesiastical is increasing very rapidly.

parish, formed in 1847 out of the parish of Brading, 9 miles East Medina rural deanery, Isle of Wight archdraconry and Winchester diocese, heautifully situated at the head of a fine open bay on the south of the island, between Dunnose and Culver Cliff. commanding automics of the second control of the s south-east from Newport and 6 south from Ryde, in the open bay on the south of the island, between Dunnose and Culver Cliff, commanding extensive views of the sea, the cliff, the Bay of Sindown and some picturesque inland scenery. The salt water at this part of the island is strong and pure, and the sands, which gradually shelve into the sea, being smooth, firm and free from pebbles, the bathing is very pleasant: there are bathing machines. The houses is very pleasant: there are canning machines. The houses stand chiefly on a gently rising ground, far above the level of the sea and the atmosphere at this delightful place is par-ticularly genial and salubrious. There are three good hotels, viz. the Royal Pier Hotel, the Sandown Hotel and the King's Head: there are also numerous furnished villas and lodging houses, and several handsome shops. The Capital and Counties Bank has a branch here. The Isle of Capital and Counties Bank has a branch here. The Isle of Wight railway has a station here, and a line was opened in February, 1875, from this place to Newport. The parish is governed by a Local Board of Health of 15 members. Christ Church, the parish church, is a spacious stone building, in the Early English style, with chancel, nave, aisles and spire, it was built in 1847, and has been twice enlarged, and now seats 800 persons: here is a memorial window of Lieut. Boxer R.N. one of the officers who perished in the illated "Captain:" the pulpit is of carved cak. The register dates from the year 1848. The living is a vicarage, yearly value between £300 and £400, with house and 18 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Church Patronage Society and held by the Rev. Gilbert Sparshott Karney M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. A stone church at Lower Sandown has been commenced; the foundation stone was laid by Lady Oglander, September, 1878. Here are Primitive Methodist, Oglander, September, 1878. Here are Primitive Methodist, Wesleyan, Congregational and Bible Christian chapels. The existing barracks are only a portion of those originally erected, and are now used as a military hospital. The popu-

SHALFLEET is a parish in the West Medina liberty and rural deanery, Isle of Wight archdeaconry, diocese of Winchester, situated about 4 miles east from Yarmouth and 6 west from Newport. The church (not dedicated) is an ancient structure, having chancel, nave, south aisle, with north and south porches (the former containing some curious strong exprise). stone carving), and low square embattled tower and spire, which has been considered of Saxon architecture, but the decorative facia, with ornamental work running round it, prove it to be Norman, and which style may be traced in several parts of the structure. The register dates from the year 1604. The living is a discharged vicarage, gross yearly value £210, with residence and 5 acres of glebe, in the gift value £210, with residence and 5 acres of giene, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held by the Rev. Frederick Harper M.A. of Queen's College, Oxford. Here are places of worship for Wesleyans, Primitive Methodists and Baptists. This parish contains three manors, viz. Shalfleet; Ningwood, a mile and a half west; and Wellow, 2 miles south-west: Lord Heytesbury is lord of the manors of Shalfleet and Wellow, and John Pennethorne, esq. of Ning-wood. The principal landowners are Lord Heytesbury, Sir John Stephen Barrington Simeon bart, and John Pennethorne and W. G. Ward, esqrs. The chief crops are wheat, barley and turnips. The area is 6,623 acres of stiff clay, sand and woodland; rateable value, £6,352; with a population in 1871 of 1,195.

WELLOW is 2 miles south-west, and Ningwood 1 mile west. NEWBRIDGE and HULVERSTONE are hamlets. Sexton, Thomas Hollis.

SHANKLIN is a village, parish and railway station, in the South-east Medina liberty and rural deanery, archdes-conry of the Isle of Wight, discose of Winchester, 8 miles south-east from Newport, 9 south from Ryde and 4 northeast from Ventner, on the coast. A partion of the village is ituated under high cliffs, but the more fashionable part is on elevated ground, having delightful views of the sea, and very romantic inland scenery. This place has rapidly and very romantic inland scenery. This place has rapidly improved and increased, and in 1863 was placed under the Local Government Act of 1858: it is abundantly supplied with excellent water, and is also lighted with gas.
The Ryde and Ventnor railway has a station here. The church of St. John the Baptist is a cruciform building : was thoughly restored, and two transcrts added, in 1859, at the cost of the patron and incumbent: it consists of chancel, mave, transepts and spire containing I bell: the original part was built in the reign of King Stephen, when his brother, Heary de Bleis, was Bishop of Winchester; it conbrother, Henry de Bleis, was Bishop of Winchester; it contains a piscina, also a very curious chest, carved with the name of Thomas Silksted, once prior of Winchester; there are also memorials to the families of Hill and Popham. The register dates from the year 1724. The living is a donative, yearly value £134, in the gift of Francis White Popham esq. and held by the Rev. George Wrenford Southouse M.A. of Oriel College, Oxford. St. Saviour's-on-the-Cliff, is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1869: the church was consecrated May 7th, 1869: it consists of chancel, nave, south aiele, and tower to be surmounted by a spire, and wes south aiele, and tower to be surmounted by a spire, and was erected at a cost of £3,500. The register dates from the year 1869. The living is a vicarage, endewed with £30, with residence, assisted by seat rents, in the gift of the rector of Shanklin and held by the Rev. Charles Isherwood Buriand M.A. of Lincoln College, Oxford. The area is 90 acres; the population in 1871 was 720. The ecclesiastical parish of St. Paul's Gatten was formed out of the parish of Brading in 1876. The church of St. Paul, in Station road, is a handsome stone building in the Rarly English style, built by subscription; it has chancel, nave, and sides: will seat 800 wili seat 800 subscription: it has chancel, nave and aisles; percons. The register dates from the year 1876. The living is a vicarage; the income is derived from the pew rents and a is a vicarage; the income is derived from the pew reats and a small endowment, in the gift of the Church Patronage Society and is held by the Rev. William Pettitt M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge. Here are Wesleyan Methodist, Congregational and Bible Christian chapels. The Town Hall, erected 1879 at a cost of £3,000, which was raised by public subscription and is to form the Literary and Scientific the control of the co Institute, is a brick building with stone front supported upon four pillars; it will seat about 500 persons. Here is a Literary and Scientific Institution, supported by voluntary contributions; also a Working Men's Club. The village contains several good hotels, two excellent libraries, many private villag, and lodging houses. A weekly paper is also published here. Shanklin Chine is a deep chasm in one of the lofty cliffs which bound the bay on which the parish is situated: it commences about a half a mile from the shore, and gradually increases in breadth and depth until it reaches the sea, where its width is about 180 feet, and its depth 270; a pathway has been cut along the side of this chasm or chine, through which flows a rivulet. The manor is vested in the family of Popham, who are also the sole landowners. The chief crops are onto and barley. The soil is various; subsoil, greensand. The area is 675 acres; rateable value, £13,259; the population in 1861 was 479, and in 1871, 1,452, exclusive of visitors.

VENTINOS is a rapidly rising bathing town, parish and polling place for the county and a terminus of the Isle of Wight railway, in the Undercliff district, between the villages of Bonchurch and St. Lawrence, 12 miles south-west from of Bonchurch and St. Lawrence, 12 miles south-west from Ryde and 10 south from Newport, in the rural deanery of East Medina, archdeaconry of the Isle of Wight and diocese of Winchester. This place has increased since 1830 from a mere hamlet to a considerable town, provided with hotels, lodging houses, reading rooms and all the necessary appendages of a watering place: the rapid rise of Ventnor is to be ascribed to its fine setuation and salubrious air. The to be ascribed to its line situation and salubrious air. The town is situated on a succession of terrace sloping from the north to the sea, at altitudes varying from 300 feet above the level of the sea to the sea shore, with the down of St. Boniface, which is of the height of about 900 feet, at its back, by which it is protected from the north winds, while its southern aspect gives throughout the year a genial temperature—in the winter a sufficient warmth and in the summer an agreeable coolness arising from the sea breeze. summer an agreeable coolness, arising from the sea breezes: it is considered the most favourable place in England for consumptive invalide, as it is visited with less rain than any other place in Great Britain and enjoys a more equable temperature throughout the year: careful observations have shown that the average temperature of the Undercliff is 7 degrees cooler in summer and 7 degrees warmer in winter than any other place in England. Commissioners were appointed by an Act obtained in 1844, under whose jurisdiction the town was drained, with many other improvements: it is now governed under the Local Government Act, 1858: in 1866 a company was incorporated by Act of Parliament to supply the town with gas and water: the railway was opened to Ventnor in the autumn of 1866, and a pier was completed in 1879. Ventnor me and clearly live and a pier was eted in 1872. Ventnor was ecclesiastically and civilly attached to Newchurch, but by the Newchurch Parish Act, 1866, it was made a distinct parish. The church of St. Catherine is in the Early Pointed style: it was erected in 1837, at the sole expense of the late John Hambrough. esq. of Steephill Castle: it has a small chancel, nave and steeple: the cost was £4,655: it will seat about 850 persons. steeple: the cost was £4,655: it will seat about 850 persons. The register dates from the year 1837. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £240, in the gift of Dudley Albert Hambrough esq. and held by the Rev. John Marland M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin; the Rev. William Walker Willan M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge, is curate in charge. Large boys', girls' and infants' schools were erected on a site also given by the late John Hambrough esq. the expenses being defrayed by public subscription, aided by a liberal grant from the Committee of Council on Education: they were erected in 1850, at a cost of £2.200. The district were erected in 1859, at a cost of £2,200. The district church of Holy Trinity was erected by subscription and was consecrated in August, 1862: it is in the Early English style, and consists of a chancel, nave and aisles, with north and south transepts thrown out from the chancel: it will seat 560 people. The register dates from the year 1862. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £300, in the gift of Mrs. Thompson, and at her decesse will be in the gift of the Mrs. Thompson, and at her decease will be in the gift of the patron of St. Catherine, Ventnor; the present incumbent is the Rev. Arthur Lewis Babington Peile M.A. of Jesus College, Cambridge. There is a Congregational chapel, a beautiful Gothic structure, rebuilt in 1854; the Wesleyans, Baptists, Primitive Methodists and Bible Christians have each a chapel here: the Brethren have also a place of meeting. The Catholic chapel was built by public subscription in 1871, the principal benefactor being R. Swift esq. M.P. About a mile on the road to St. Lawrence is Steephill Castle, the seaf Dudley Albert Hambrough esq. completed in 1875: let is of Dudley Albert Hambrough esq. completed in 1835: It is a noble stone building, of an oblong form, with a fine square tower on the north side; several of the rooms are of hand-some dimensions and it has all the advantages of a regularly built mansion, with the picturesque exterior of the castellated style: the site of the castle was the favourite marine retreat of the late Earl Dysart: in front of the castle, near the cliff, is a cave: a small flagstaff marks the spot. The London or the late Earl Dysert: in front of the castle, near the cliff, is a cave; a small flagstaff marks the spot. The London City Mission Seaside Home was erected in 1867, at the sole cost of the late Capt. Mark Huish, and presented to the society by his widow: the object is to enable each of the missionaries and their wives, by turns, to spend a fortnight here during the year. The soil is chiefly chalk; subsoil, limestone, on a gault base. The area is 5,081 acres; net rateable value, £26,773; the population in 1861 was 3,208 and in 1871, 4,841, including visitors.

The pier, opened in July 1876, was constructed by the Corporation: its length is 700 feet, and it has a 100 feet head frestage and three separate landing stages; the cost of erection was about £4,000. The expertation of fine white sand, which was annually shipped in great quantities, not only to the glasshouses throughout the United Kingdom, but to Liston and the Rest Indies, is still continued to a small ex-test; there are many small vessels engaged off the coast in dredging for iron ore and cement stone, the former of which is shipped to the smelting turnaces in Wales and the latter is shipped to the smelting rurnaces in waies and the latter to the Medina mills for the menufacture of coment. The imports are coal and timber. The town is well built, and is a corporate town; the corporation consists of twelve members. The borough was disfranchised by the R-form Act, having previously sent two members to Parliament from the reign of Elizabeth. The church of St. James consists of a chancel and nave, and having become much dilapidated, was remained (the tower being raised above 30 feet by the was repaired (the tower being raised above 30 feet by the liberality of Daniel Alexander esq. a Dissenter): the repairs of the church, amounting to nearly £1,000, were paid or without a church rate, by donations and public subscription: in a small chapel attached to the church is a splendid monument to Sir Robert Holmes, consisting of a colossal statue, of exquisite workmanship, in beautiful Parian marble. In 1873 the chancel and other parts of the church were restored, the east window was filled with stained glass by the late rector (Rev. J. Blackburn), in memory of his son: a stained window was placed in the south end by J. Gassiott esq. in memory of Admiral Love: the reredos, with the decoration of the eastern wall of the chancel, was erected as decoration of the eastern wall of the chancel, was erected as a memorial of Mrs. Blake, by James Blake and members of his family: a handsome lectern, in bronze, silver and costly stones, was presented by the surviving children of S.
